

LD

1435

.6

1874 f

Dartmouth '74

Class LD1435

Book .6
1874 f

PRESENTED BY

Princeton College

J. W. Boutwell Boston

This Indenture made, executed, and completed this Tenth Day of May Anno Domini 1763; Witnesseth
that Dorothy Moore of Mansfield, in the County of Windham, and Colony of Connecticut, in New England, Widow and Relict of Joshua Moore late of s^d. Mansfield dec^d., and sole Executrix of and Legatee in the Last will, & Testament of the s^d. Joshua dec^d., in consideration, that the s^d. Dec^d., in his Life Time (viz) on the 17th Day of July, in the Year of our Lord 1736, by his Indented Covenant of s^d. Date made and executed by, & between him the s^d. Dec^d, of the One Party &
Col^d Elisha Williams, together with the Rev^d. Samuel Moseley, Eleazer Wheelock, & Benjamin Comroy of the Other Parties
for founding, & supporting a Charity School in the North Society in the Town of Lebanon, in s^d. Windham County by the Name of The Charity School in Lebanon, founded by Joshua Moore for the Educating, or Instructions of the Indians,
Natives, of any, or all the Indian Tribes in North America, or Other poor Persons, (as they the s^d. Williams, Moseley, Wheelock, and Comroy, & their Successors should think best) in Reading, Writing, & all Liberal Arts, & Sciences, more especially for Instructing s^d. Indians & Poor in the Knowledge & Practice of the Protestant Christian Religion, did for the Encouragement of a so truly great & good Design, attempt the conveyance of one certain Messuage, or Tenement situate in s^d. North Society in s^d. Lebanon, bounded & Described as follows (viz) beginning at a Stump on the West Side of Hartford Road & which is the Eastwaddy Corner of Land belonging to the Heirs of Philip Sudd
Dec^d., thence running by s^d. Land Southwaddy about 22 Rods to an heap of Sticks in the Dam-Brook, adjoining to Seth Poff's
Land, thence running down the Creek in the Land of s^d. Poff's Land 12 Rods half Rods to a Stake with Stones about it on the East Side of s^d. Brook, thence running Northeasterly with a Stonewall 20 Rods to Hartford Road, thence Northwesterly by Hartford Road 17 1/2 Rods to the first mentioned Bound, being in quantity about Two Acres of Land, unto them the s^d. Williams, Moseley, Wheelock & Comroy & to their Successors forever; as by the Indenture afores^d - or Record thereof may appear, & whereas the

R. Mosley, Wheelock & Pomroy the only Survivors of the Parties named in v. Indented Covenant, are by their Council advised that by means of the said Williams, Mosley, Wheelock, & Pomroy failing in Obtaining an Incorporating Charter to themselves & their Successors for founding, supporting, & Regulating v. School They are Resolved incapable of taking benefit by said Conveyance attempted by v. Joshua Deas, as aforesaid, in manner & form, as is in v. Indented Covenant expressed, Nevertheless as in Pursuance of v. intended Conveyance a Charity School is by the said Eleazer Wheelock of v. Lebanon formed, & supported for the same Purpose, & to the same End, as proposed in founding the aforesaid Charity School, in the aforesaid North Society, in Lebanon aforesaid, by the same Name aforesaid, & by himself only govern, order, & Regulated with hopefull Prospect of Obtaining all the great & valuable Benefits heretofore proposed in founding & supporting such a School, That the charitable Intent of the said Joshua Deceased, in founding a Charity School by the Name & for the Purpose herein before expressed, be not frustrated & to enable the v. Rev. Eleaz. Wheelock to support, Regulate, & Govern the v. Charity School by him formed, & supported in the Name aforesaid, in v. North Society in Lebanon aforesaid, in Virtue of the aforesaid Conveyance from the v. Joshua Deas, Doth by these Presents for himself, his Heirs, Exors. & Admrs. fully, freely, & Absolutely Remise, Release & forever quitclaim unto him the v. Eleazer Wheelock & to his Heirs & Assigns, all and the whole of the herein before described Messuage, or about Two Acres of Land & Appurtenances as the same is herein before bounded and Described. To have & to hold the v. Remise & quitclaimed Lands with all & singular the Appurtenances, and Privileges thereof unto him the v. Eleazer Wheelock & to his Heirs & Assigns forever, without Reclaim, Challenge, or Contradiction, of, from, or by me the v. Dorothy More or my Heirs Exors. or Admrs. or any other Person, or Persons Claiming the same by, from or Under Me or Them, so and only so as that v. Said Wheelock, his Heirs Exors. or Admrs. shall and do use and improve v. Quitclaimed Lands & appurtenances or the avails thereof to and for the only Benefit & in Support of the aforesaid School and thereof Render an account unto the Rev. Solomon Williams of Lebanon Stephen White of Windham & Richard Satter of v. Mansfield, of such his Improvement of v. Estate, to their acceptance and approbation, or to the acceptance & approbation of

Other

Either two of them therein agreeing Within the Term of Four years Next
Coming from and after the Date of these Presents of thereto by the aforesaid Rev^d
Gentlemen or Either two of them thereto Requested, in Witness and for Confirmation Whereof I the S^d Dorothy More have hereunto set my hand and affixed my Seal the Day and Year first before Written -

Signed, Sealed and Deliv^d
in presence of us, Justices

Dorothy More

Attest
her

Dorothy Turner
mark

Manfield in the Colony of Connecticut 10th of May Anno Dom: 1763
Personally Came and appeared Dorothy More Signer and Exorator to the before and abovescribed Instrument and acknowledged the Same to be her free act &c
Deed; _____ Coram Shubael Conant Just^s

D. Webster
from
Mrs. More

18 Feb 1771
Recd from Mrs.
Liberation Records.
Lib. L. p. 954

Wm. Williams
Regis 3
1771 More

Approved by Mrs.
M. W.

74

OF THE

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE

7
1
2
3
4
5
6

A.D. MDCCCXCIX.

LD 1435
6
1874 8

BUSKIRK'S PRESS
(MANHATTAN)
NEW YORK CITY

E. J.
Frank. N. Parsons
July 10. 1934

Printed in New York
June 21, 1899

1874

1899

*The century's quadrant a circle hath made
Circumferenced by memory's mystical braid.*

Preface.

44 West Thirty-sixth Street.

CLASSMATES :

This volume is the result of work undertaken in conformity with your instructions given at the reunion in 1894. Its pages contain all the facts, appropriate for such a work, that our most strenuous efforts have been able to secure. Its defects are, in part, such as will always be found in similar reports until Dartmouth alumni awake to an appreciation of the importance to the college of such records, and of their own indifference to the interest of their Alma Mater. Its further defects are such as you must have foreseen when electing a secretary and hence agreed to accept.

The arrangement of names by departments was adopted as that with which we were familiar when in college. That the records for the scientific men are less complete is due to the lack of frequent reports in the earlier years, which, for the academic division have furnished valuable and otherwise unobtainable information. The steel engraving which forms the frontispiece was found among the papers of my beloved father. I take pleasure in presenting it to you as from him. Despite the discouragements which have attended this work, it has not been without its recompense in the renewal of old friendships and an insight of the matured characters of the men of '74. The class may justly be proud of what this record shows it has accomplished. Aside from three, the victims of disease, no man has done less, while many have done more than their college course prophesied. On this our twenty-fifth birthday we lay our trophies at the feet of our Alma Mater, and gather, in her honor, the largest proportionate representation ever known at Dartmouth.

CHARLES E. QUIMBY,
Secretary.

New York, June 1, 1899.

ACADEMIC CLASS

JOHN ADAMS AIKEN, ψ. γ.

John A. Aiken comes of a family which, in its several branches, has for many years been prominent in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. His father, David Aiken, of the class of 1830, after his marriage to Mary Elizabeth Adams of Amherst, Mass., passed his life as a lawyer and on the bench at Greenfield, Mass., where Aiken was born, September 16, 1850. He was fitted at Phillips, Andover, under Dr. Taylor, and entered Dartmouth with the class of '73.

At the end of Junior year he left college and, returning to Greenfield, was engaged in teaching for a year. Having regained his strength in '73, he returned to join the class of '74. On graduation he began, or rather resumed, the study of law under his father's direction. During the following two years he took one course at the Harvard Law School and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1876. He at once began practice at his home, where he still remains. A strong love for nature very early led him to become interested in agricultural development, and in the first year after leaving college he was made secretary of the Franklin County Agricultural Society. This position he filled for two years, and has continued to manifest his interest in this work even since his appointment to the bench, by accepting associated offices requiring less labor when professional demands upon his time became more exacting. In 1883 he represented his district in the Massachusetts Legislature, serving on the Probate and Chancery Committee and the Committee on Public Education. In 1891 he was elected, by an unprecedented majority, District Attorney for the counties of Franklin and Hampden, serving in this office for six years. On September 16, 1898, he was appointed by Gov. Walcott a Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, a court commonly known in Massachusetts as the Dartmouth Club.

Aiken was married March 5, 1895, to Miss Maria Willard Dickenson, of Baltimore, Md., to whose charms and worth "Jack" pays this characteristic (and just) tribute: "And she has lived with me ever since, which is more than some could do."

FRED. LYMAN ALLEN, A. A. Φ.

Fred. L. Allen was born on July 7, 1848, at White River Junction, Vt., where his father, Samuel J. Allen, was in 1874 a prominent physician, with an extensive general and consultation practice. His mother, Mary Jane Lyman, was of an old New England family widely known in northern Vermont. Allen's preparation was under the tuition of the Rev. Mr. Edwards of West Lebanon. On leaving college he entered Andover Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in June, 1877. In the following September he was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church at Walpole, N. H. The sermon on this occasion was delivered by Prof. Henry E. Parker of Dartmouth. He remained at Walpole until 1884, when he accepted a call to Henniker, where he was a pastor for twelve years. On leaving Henniker in 1896 he returned to the old Lyman homestead at White River Junction to reside with his brother. Allen was married on June 19, 1878, at Cambridge, Mass., to Miss Adelaide Merrill, a daughter of Rev. Josiah Merrill, of the class of 1841, Dartmouth. He has two children, a son, born June 11, 1880, and a daughter, born May 22, 1884.

HORATIO NELSON ALLIN, Jr., K.K.K.

Horatio N. Allin, Jr., was born August 7, 1848, in Guildhall, Vt., where his father was a farmer. He began his preparation for college at the high school of Lancaster, N. H., but completed his course at the Academic Seminary in Gorham, Me. His first experience as a teacher, in the winter of '68, was repeated in '72 and '73 at Lancaster, N. H., and on "the Cape." Allin has been the only one, from a goodly number who might have done so, to hint at interruptions of the harmonious relations between himself and the faculty, when in '71 he was for a brief period connected with McGill College in Montreal, Can. On the 27th of September following graduation he was married to Miss Carrie Hall Mayberry, of Edgartown, Mass., a daughter of Edwin Mayberry, M.D., a graduate of Bowdoin. Starting their bridal tour at the White Mountains of New Hampshire, it led him through Chicago and the larger cities of the West to California. From there he crossed the Pacific to China and Japan. While in Yokohama he met Prof. C. A. Young, and through his influence accepted the chair of Instructor in Law in the Royal University at Tokio, Japan, where he began teaching after visiting Hong Kong, Canton, and other cities of China. This position he retained for three years, and in '78 returned to America. Soon after this he began the study of law at the Harvard Law School, and in 1879 opened an office in Waltham, Mass., and later in Boston, where he is now located at No. 1 Beacon street. At first he was associated with Willard Harland, of Boston, and S. W. McCall of '74. His firm at present is "Allin, Piper & Harris," the last two being Dartmouth graduates of '94. Allin's residence is in Waltham, Mass. He has no children.

ALEXANDER RUSSELL ARCHIBALD, θ. A. X.

Alexander R. Archibald, the genial Hercules and one of the class elders, entered life under the flag of England in Halifax County, Nova Scotia, on July 27, 1847. His father, Matthew Archibald, a sturdy Scotchman, kept his son under the paternal eye in the free life of a farmer until his twentieth year, when Alexander entered Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, N. H., to prepare for college. Entering with the class in 1870, he began in Freshman winter the Dartmouth man's best training by teaching at North Hartland, Vt. This training was continued successive winters of the college course at East Hanover, Washingtonville, N. Y., and East Jaffrey, N. H. Such an experience naturally led to the adoption of teaching as a profession, and for the first two years after graduation he was principal of the high school at Glencoe, Minn. The following year he became commandant of a military academy at Lake Calhoun, Minn., a position which we may justly assume was obtained by reason of his training under Capt. Horne. In 1877 he established at Minneapolis, Minn., under his own direction as proprietor, a mercantile academy. This institution became recognized as one of the most thorough and successful business colleges in the West. In 1888 Archibald relinquished this work, the college still retaining his name, to take up more general business enterprises, which, by reason for his previous investments, were largely in real estate transactions in connection with the development of his own holdings. Incidentally he became interested, both financially and as an official, in building and loan associations, and later in mining. Under the financial depression of the following years he was led to abandon business for his former occupation, and about '92 again established a business college in Minneapolis, where he still remains, attended by similar success in his work. In 1877 he was married to Miss Sadie J. Appleton, a former pupil at Glencoe, Minn. In 1898 he reports one son eighteen years of age, just finishing his studies preparatory for college. "Archie" says peace and prosperity rest in a home which he has called his own for seventeen years. He may be found at 16 South Fifth street, Minneapolis, Minn.

CHARLES WELLING BADGLEY, A.K.E.

Charles W. Badgley, whose father, Peter Welling Badgley, was a merchant of Milwaukee, Wis., entered life in that city on the 24th of April, 1852. After completing the work in the graded schools he began his preparation for college at the Milwaukee Academy. This course was supplemented by a brief term at East Hampton, N. H., previous to entering college. On graduation he returned to his home in Milwaukee and for a year was employed in a wholesale grocery house. In 1875 he was attracted to Colorado, where for three years he engaged in mining and allied enterprises. Returning to Milwaukee in 1878 he first, and for some time devoted himself to the brokerage business. Meantime he became interested in metal manufacturing, to which he later gave his entire attention. This led very naturally and directly to his second removal to Colorado in 1885, when he established at Denver the firm of Badgley & Watkins, manufacturers and dealers in mining machinery and all forms of miners', plumbers', and machinists' supplies. His letterhead of 1889 shows a large three-story warehouse devoted to their business. In 1896 Badgley sold his interest in this firm and has since been occupied with the care of former investments and the prosecution of various mining enterprises in Colorado. He was married September 28, 1881, to Miss Bessie Bingham of Milwaukee. Their first child, a son, born in July, '82, lived but three months. They now have four children, Annette, born October 6, 1883; Charles W., Jr., born March 27, 1885; Franklin Ilsley, born November 27, 1886, and Jerome Bingham, born October 3, 1888. Badgley's address is still Denver, Col.

ORRIN GAY BAKER, A.K.E.

Orrin G. Baker, whose father, John Baker, was a farmer in Derry, N. H., was born on December 23, 1847. His early education was gained in his native town, where he also prepared for college at the Pinkerton Academy. He first entered Dartmouth with the class of 1873. Being compelled to leave during Sophomore year, he returned to join the class of '74 in the Fall of '72. Like so many others, Baker was engaged in teaching both before and during his college course. His schools were in Londonderry, Derry, and Hartford, Vt. He entered Andover Theological Seminary in the fall of '74, and after graduation in 1877 became the acting pastor of the Congregational Church at Jamaica, Vt., in January, 1878, where he was ordained in February following. This charge he retained until 1886, when he removed to East Fairfield, Vt. His connection with the church in this place continued until May, 1888, when he was called to West Charlestown, Vt. He remained here for six years, filling not only his own pulpit, but also supplying a vacancy in the church at Morgan, Vt. In 1892 he accepted a call to the church in Ferrisburg, Vt., where he still remains the ever-faithful pastor. In May, 1883, he was married to Miss Alida M. Barnes, of Walpole, N. H. They have eight children; Harrison and John, born in Jamaica; Eliza, born at East Fairfield; Paul, Stella, and Edward, born at Charlestown, and Faith and Orrin, born at Ferrisburg, Vt.

FRANK OTIS BALDWIN, Ψ.Υ.

Frank O. Baldwin was born at Malden, Mass., August 25, 1853. Six months later his father, Otis Lincoln Baldwin, a shoe manufacturer, removed to Lynn, in the high school of which place Baldwin received his preparation for college. Since graduation his life has been devoted entirely to teaching. He was at New Providence, Iowa, from December, 1874, to March, 1875, and then at Eldora until July, 1875. In Sept., '75 he was appointed Superintendent of Schools at Webster City, Iowa, where he remained until April, 1879. The following year, '79 to '80, he was principal of the Cobbet Grammar School at Lynn, Mass., and for the next two years held the same position in the Lynn High School. In 1882 he established the Lee Hall Classical and Commercial School, of which he was the proprietor and principal until 1888. From 1888 to 1894 he was at the head of the Punchard Free School in Andover, Mass. This place he relinquished for the school year of '94 and '95 to become classical master in the University School for Boys in Baltimore, Md., but returned to his former position at Andover in 1895, where he still remains.

During his residence in Lynn he was a member of the School Committee for three years and chairman for one year. At Andover he held the same office for the five years previous to the year spent in Baltimore.

Baldwin was married on July 3, 1877, to Miss Mary Dianthe Dudley. His oldest child, Ralph Dudley Baldwin, was born September 13, 1880. A second son, Arthur Frank, born August 30, 1883, died in November, 1884. A daughter, Florence Lavinia, was born September 26, 1885.

10

ELIEL SHUMWAY BALL, Θ. Δ. Χ.

Eliel S. Ball was born in Townsend, Mass., March 27, 1848, where his father, Noah Ball, was a leading business man. To the regular academic training for college which he received at the Lawrence Academy in Groton, Mass., he added that of teaching during the Winter of '69 and '70 at Shirley, Mass. His college course was similarly supplemented each Winter. He had charge of the school at West Groton, Mass., in 1870, at Oxford in 1871, at Jaffrey, N. H., in 1873, and in 1874 relieved Prof. Barrows of Meriden for a time. He was the captain of the class nine for a year, and an editor of the Dartmouth. On leaving college he was appointed Professor of Mathematics and Sciences in the Lawrence Academy at Groton, Mass., and three years later became its principal. In 1881 he resigned his position at Groton to accept that of Superintendent of Schools at Bradford, Pa. He remained there but a year, and in 1882 received a similar appointment over the schools of Westerly, R. I. About 1887 he gave up his school work, in part probably on account of his health, and, moving to Waltham, Mass., opened a book and stationery store. No particulars of his death, which occurred at Waltham, January 12, 1892, are obtainable. A love which started in his boyhood and was cherished ever afterward, culminated in his engagement during senior year and his marriage on August 4, 1875, to Miss Elia F. Sawin of Townsend, Mass., a graduate of Mt Holyoke Seminary. Their first child, Rosa Julia, born July 14, 1876, and a second, Arthur Watson, born February 18, 1878, both died of diphtheria in 1880. A second son was born February 17, 1886.

JAMES CROCKER BARRETT, A.K.E.

James C. Barrett was born in Woodstock, Vt., on December 21, 1851, where his father, Hon. James Barrett, LL.D., of the class of 1838, had for many years been a lawyer and judge of wide reputation. Barrett received his preparatory education in the schools at Woodstock, supplemented undoubtedly by the teachings of his father, whose character was clearly reproduced in the son. His health was far from good when he entered college, but his New England pluck supplied the force to carry him through. On graduation he at once began the study of law in Woodstock, but in the Fall of '76 was forced by ill health to take a rest, and nearly a year was spent in travel in Europe. Soon after his return he began the practice of his profession at Rutland, Vt. Success was not delayed, and Barrett soon became a lawyer of established reputation. In 1882 his father removed to Rutland and became the senior member with his son in the legal firm of Barrett & Barrett. In June, 1878, Barrett was married to Miss Mary A. Whitney of Woodstock. His son, Frederick J., was born in 1880, and a daughter, Ruth, in 1882. On the evening of February 14, 1887, occurred the accident which resulted in his death. With his wife and a friend he went to a toboggan slide for an evening's sport. In some unknown manner one of the boards forming the side guard to the chute had been broken, and a pointed fragment turned into the track. As Barrett's party descended, Mrs. Barrett, who was in front, passed the board unharmed. The friend, coming next, was struck and severely injured. The shock threw Barrett from the toboggan against the board, which, striking the lower part of the abdomen, was driven through his body with the point protruding from the back near the spine. Soon after his wound had been dressed Barrett regained full consciousness, which he retained until just before his death on the following evening. Such an event, however humble the victim, could not fail to excite universal sympathy and sorrow. In this case it justified the freest expressions in eulogy of the dead, for Barrett had gained, by strength of character and mind, universal respect and admiration. It is unnecessary to quote from the many public tributes to his character and ability, for no utterances at such a time can do such honor to his memory as is found in the position accorded him when alive. We do Barrett but scant justice in saying that his life had been such that those who knew him but little, equally with those who knew him most intimately, were ever eager and glad to do him honor and to make public expression of their appreciation of his intellectual power and nobility of character.

12

ALFRED WADLEIGH BEASLEY, W. L.

Alfred W. Beasley, according to the college records, is a son of Nathaniel K. Beasley, and was born March 27, 1853. He entered college from Peoria, Ill., where, it is presumed, he gained his preparation in the high school. Our only knowledge of his life since graduation has been derived from classmates and accidental sources. His persistent refusal of all information concerning himself may fairly indicate the change in his character, since the days when he was the genial classmate and affectionate friend, although he has by no means become a morbid recluse. Previous to 1880 nothing was known of his doings except that he was living in Peoria. At that date Moore reports having seen him in June, 1878; that he had been married about six months and was then in the hide and leather business with his father. He certainly was in the hide-and-seek business with Scott. A later report states that he was married in '76 and had ('78) one child. Another of about the same date refers to him as having been for some time instructor in mathematics in the Peoria High School, and speaks of his popularity and a general desire that he should become the principal. In June, 1889, he was elected to that position, which he still retains. For some time after graduation he was much interested and took a prominent part in athletic sports. At the Western races (date unknown) he was stroke of the winning crew and also took first prize in the junior single scull race. When last heard of he had two children.

FERDINAND BLANCHARD, W. R.

Ferdinand Blanchard was born on the 8th of November, 1851, at West Windsor, Vt. His preparatory education, as gained at the Montpelier Graded School and the Vermont Conference Seminary, was supplemented by a winter's teaching at Moretown, Vt., in '68-'69. He also taught during Junior winter at Brownsville, Vt. For a short time after graduation he was engaged in introducing school books through his native State. After a severe illness in October, 1874, he began the study of medicine at Hanover, graduating in the Fall of '77. Having been married in April, 1875, to Miss Alice G. White, of Woodstock, Vt., he made West Windsor his home for a time while studying, where he was Superintendent of Schools as well as a member and treasurer of the School Committee. In 1876 he moved to Hanover, locating on College street. At this time, as well as later on, he found time to do some thoroughly scientific work in botany, aside from his professional studies. At a celebration in his native town, July 4, 1877, he read a short poem, entitled "Remember the Fathers."

Directly upon the receipt of his degree of M.D. he began the practice of his profession at Union Village, Vt. This choice of a location reveals the character of the man most clearly. With a mind naturally inclined to scientific work and undoubtedly fitted for a wider field, lack of confidence, apparently, in himself led him to this obscure place.

In July, 1879, Blanchard moved to Peacham, Vt. Here he attained deserved success to the limits possible in a country town.

Just how long he remained in Peacham is uncertain, for here the record is broken. In 1890 he was known to be in Washington, where he was connected with the Census Bureau. It was in Washington that his death, of which we have no particulars, occurred in December, 1892. The honor of having captured the first of life's coveted prizes rests with Blanchard, for to his daughter, Mabel Julia, born January 31, 1876, was presented the class cup at the reunion in 1877. His other children were Clair M., born November 16, 1877; Ida W., born August 31, 1879; Linn R., born June 17, 1881, and William G., born June 18, 1888. In the spring of 1880 his entire family suffered an attack of malignant diphtheria, from which his three daughters died. To Blanchard is due also the unique honor of being the only man in the class to render a "quid pro quo" beyond the traditional three dollars on receiving his master's degree. This was a poem, entitled "Master of Arts." As Blanchard is, so far as known, the only poet in the class, this poem is given later, as presented for the master's degree.

TO ASCUTNEY. 19.73 MILES.

MARY HITCHCOCK MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

HENRY GREEN BRAINERD, A.A.Φ.

Henry G. Brainerd is a son of Timothy G. and Lucinda (Dewey) Brainerd, and was born May 23, 1852, at Londonderry, N. H., where his father, a graduate of Yale in 1830, was pastor of a Congregational church. In 1855 his father moved to Halifax, Mass., and later, in 1867, to Grinnell, Iowa. Here Brainerd entered Iowa College, leaving at the end of sophomore year to join the class of '74 at Dartmouth, in the Fall of '71. He also, was a teacher, both before and during his college course. The first year after graduation he was a principal and superintendent of schools at Independence, Iowa. In 1875 he began the study of medicine, first at the Iowa State University and later at Rush Medical College in Chicago, where he graduated in February, 1878. During his medical course he was connected for a year ('76-77) with a hospital for the insane at Mount Pleasant, Iowa. After spending a short time in special studies he became assistant physician in a similar institution at Independence, and in 1881 was made first assistant. In 1887 he resigned this position and began general practice at Los Angeles, California, where he still continues.

Soon after settling in Los Angeles he was appointed to the chair of mental and nervous diseases in the Los Angeles Medical College, which is a department of the University of Southern California. He is now dean of that institution.

For some years he was superintendent of the city and county hospital and has been president of the County, and vice-president of the State Medical Society. He was married September 3, 1887, to Miss Fannie Howard of Chicago, a graduate of Abbott Academy at Andover, Mass. They have two sons, seven and nine years of age.

EDWARD JOSIAH BROWN, M.D.

Edward J. Brown, the son of Ira and Emily (Clark) Brown was born Jan. 14, 1851, in Burke, Vt., where his father, a physician and graduate of Castleton, Vt., was in practice until 1865, when he removed to Wells River. Brown was prepared for college at Kimball Union Academy. During his college course he joined the great majority as a teacher for two winters. In Senior year, with the view of becoming a civil engineer, he took special work in that line, which resulted in trouble with his eyes that has been more or less constant ever since. On graduation he went West and taught for a term at Eden Prairie, Minn. He was later engaged in business in Melrose, Minn. From there he went to Paducah, Ky., and to obtain rest for his eyes, engaged in canvassing. In July, 1876, he returned to Wells River and began the study of medicine. He remained there, aside from the time given to lectures at Hanover, until he went to New York, for his final course, where he graduated at the New York University in 1879. In the Spring of 1879 he began practice at Littleton, N. H., where he remained for a year. He was then four years at Haverhill, N. H.

With the cessation of some family obligations holding him in the East, he removed in 1882 to Minneapolis, Minn., where he established himself in practice. He soon took up the specialty of diseases of the eye and ear, in which he has attained a most pleasing success. As a citizen he has been active in all enterprises directed to the suppression of immorality, and was instrumental not only in organizing a society for this purpose, but also in securing legislation to the same end. In 1888, he became connected with the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Minneapolis as professor of preventive medicine and lecturer on diseases of the eye. In the same year he did some work in the line of his specialty in New York, which was continued later in Europe. Brown does not fail to take a vacation each year, a part of which is usually spent in the East. In April, 1890, he was married to Miss Mary Peck Fullerton, a native of Montpelier, Vt. They have three children, Edward T., born Sept. 3, 1891; John C., born Oct. 24, 1892, and Emily C., born Oct. 15, 1895.

CHARLES FRELINGHUYSEN CASWELL, A.K.E.

Charles Frank Caswell, as the name stood in the catalogue, was a son of Cornelius E. Caswell, a farmer of Strafford, N. H., and Betsey Thurston Chase. He was born in Strafford May 10, 1851, where he lived until 1858, when his father removed to Dover. His preparatory studies were begun at Franklin Academy, of that city, and completed at the Northwood Seminary. In July after graduation he entered the law office of N. M. Hawkes in Lynn, Mass., where he continued his studies until admitted to the bar in September, 1877. He at once began practice in Lynn. Four years later, he laid aside law and going to Colorado was for the next four years interested in mining at various places in that State. In the Fall of 1885, finding this occupation unsatisfactory, he resumed the practice of law at Grand Junction, Colorado, where he still may be found. He was married May 7, 1891, to Miss Jessie Tenney Gray, a daughter of B. Gray, Esq., of Kansas City, a graduate of Ann Arbor. They have no children.

JOSEPH LEWIS CAVERLY, K.K.K.

Joseph L. Caverly, son of John S. Caverly, a farmer of Barrington, N. H., was born in that town on March 15, 1850. His early education was gained in the schools of his native place, and his final preparation for college at New Hampton Academy.

He began teaching before entering college and continued this work each winter of his course, at Madbury, N. H., Lebanon, Conn., Amesbury, Mass., and in the famous schools of Salisbury, Mass. On graduation he adopted teaching as his life work, and was first at Strafford, N. H. in the Fall of 1874; then at Gloucester, Mass., in the Winter of 1874 and 1875, and again at Salisbury, in the Spring of 1875. In April, 1875, he went to New Market, N. H., in charge of the high school. After four years in this place in Sept., 1879, he was appointed sub-master of the Rice Training School of Boston, Mass. This connection he still retains. From 1879 to 1888 he resided in Boston, since which time his home has been in Newton, Mass., where Davis and Powers are also to be found. In the Summer of 1887 he spent two months of travel in Europe. Caverly was married Nov. 29, 1877, to Miss Mary Cecilia O'Connor. They have had seven children: Marion C., born Oct. 12, 1878; died in Jan., 1881; Monica M., born July, 1883; Constance F., born Sept., 1888; Edith M., born March, 1890; Frances, born July 10, 1892; died, April, 1893; Reginald C., born April, 1894, and Francis M., born March, 1896.

HENRY FRANCIS CHASE.

Henry F. Chase was born on Dec. 5, 1852, at Lynn, Mass., where his father, George H. Chase, was engaged in business. His early studies were in the graded schools, and his college preparation was gained at the high school in his native city. After graduation he returned to Lynn and in company with Caswell began the study of law. On the completion of these studies he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in Sept., 1876, and at once began practice. In 1878, he was reported as having attained very considerable success in his business. At that time he was definitely located in an office at 102 Market Street, Lynn. Very soon after this report (Jan. 1, 1878), certainly during that year, he developed mental disease which speedily assumed such a violent form as to necessitate his confinement under medical supervision. The hopes of his recovery, which for a time were entertained, soon proved unfounded. It is known that for the following fifteen years his condition changed only for the worse, if at all. The names of the institutions in which he was for a time detained suggest greatly restricted means for support. It has been impossible to learn any facts concerning his condition for the past six years. He was never married.

DOANE COGSWELL, A.K.E.

Doane Cogswell, who bears a name widely known in Massachusetts, was born at Bradford, April 29, 1851. His father, George Cogswell, a graduate of the New Hampshire (Dart.) Medical College in 1830, was for many years a practising physician of Bradford whose reputation extended his work widely throughout that section of the State. Cogswell's preparatory studies were pursued at Phillips Academy, Andover, under the reign of the famous "Uncle Sam" Taylor, father of our classmate Taylor. On graduation he entered Harvard Medical School, but after two years relinquished his studies on account of ill health. An inherited love of a farmer's life, which had been intensified by the circumstances of his earlier years, soon led him to purchase his father's farm with the purpose of devoting his whole attention to farming. This he has done with such thorough knowledge of the requirements as always insures success. In harmony with the spirit of the times he has become a specialist, as a breeder of Holstein-Friesian cattle of the purest blood. The pride with which he speaks of his work displays an appreciation of the value of high class, thorough work in any undertaking. He was married, Dec. 20, 1883, to Miss Sarah Catherine Drury of Gardner, Mass. "Mine," he writes, "was a happy home until the death of Mrs. Cogswell, from typhoid fever, May 22, 1892." Two sons, nine and fifteen years of age, are now in training to enter Dartmouth, where he hopes and intends that they shall do honor to their father and the college. In 1891 he was the Republican candidate for representative to the General Court of Massachusetts, but was defeated. A second nomination the following year was declined on account of the death of his wife. He is now one of the inspectors under the State Cattle Commission. For some years he has been a trustee of the Bradford Academy for Young Ladies and was also treasurer until he resigned that office in 1892. He has held numerous town offices and was for some years Justice of the Peace. "Among other honors," he says, "I may mention that I am bald, gray, and wear glasses," to which we take the liberty of adding, as the tribute of a college chum, the attainment of universal respect as an honored citizen and faithful friend.

EDWIN CORYDON CRAWFORD, K.K.K.

Although the influence of the Civil War upon the ages of Dartmouth students ceased to be apparent by 1870, '74 was not without those older men who serve as ballast in a class of youngsters. Edwin C. Crawford stood third in point of age in the class of 1874. At the time of his birth, April 10, 1845, his father, Lewis Crawford, was a farmer at Fostoria, Ohio, but emigrated in 1849 to Indiana, settling at Cedarville, near Ft. Wayne. Crawford remained at work on the farm until of age when he determined to prepare himself for college. The first year was devoted to obtaining the necessary funds, partly by teaching. The following year, after one term at the Ft. Wayne High School, finding it necessary to resume teaching, he fortunately secured the principalship of one of the city schools. This position he held for a year, and two years later graduated from the high school. During the Summer of 1870 he was city editor of the Ft. Wayne Gazette until he entered Dartmouth in the Fall. The work of teaching, in which he was still engaged while in the high school, he continued each year of the college course, and some weeks before graduation was appointed principal of the high school in Waukegan, Ill. During the four years he held this position his spare time was devoted to reading law and, after a further year devoted entirely to that study with Judge Francis E. Clark of the class of '51 (Dart.), he was admitted to the bar at Chicago in Oct., 1879. He immediately opened an office at 86 LaSalle St., Chicago, where he continued in practice by himself until 1892, when he formed a partnership with W. G. Burleigh (Dart. '72). Their offices are now at 100 E. Washington street. From the first Crawford has been prominent in local and State politics both as a speaker and writer, but has never himself been a candidate for office. Soon after his admission to the bar he wrote a text-book on "Civil Government," which has been used extensively in the public schools of Chicago and the West. He was delegate to the county and congressional district Republican conventions in 1888, and was Memorial Day orator in Waukegan in 1889. From 1879 to 1885 his home was in Chicago, then at Waukegan until 1897, when he built a house for himself at Evanston, the first suburb north of Chicago. In June, 1882, he was married to Miss Josephine M. Wheeler of Waukegan, but has no children.

WILLIAM HENRY DAVIS, K.K.K.

William H. Davis, a son of Aaron and Mary (Wells) Davis, was born April 23, 1852, at Chelsea, Vt., the largest town in the county, where his father was a leading merchant for many years prior to his death in 1881. After completing the work of the local schools, in 1867 he entered Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, then under the charge of Dr. Richards. While in college he indulged in teaching for a single winter only. In the Fall of 1874 he entered Union Theological Seminary, New York City, where he became a class- and room-mate of Francis Brown of the class of '70. For the Summer of 1875 he was engaged in missionary work at Baillie, N. B., and other summers of his theological course in pulpits near New York. Graduating from the seminary in May, 1877, the following July he was ordained pastor of the Washington Street Church at Beverly, Mass. At the end of a year, June, 1878, he went abroad and spent over eleven months in study and travel in Europe, along the Nile and in Palestine. In 1884 he accepted a call to the First Congregational Church of Detroit, Mich., which under his guidance became the strongest church of that denomination in the State. The Summer of 1889 he also spent in travel abroad. After twelve year's most successful work in Detroit he was invited in 1896 to become the pastor of the Eliot Congregational Church, at Newton, Mass., where he is now settled. For ten years past he has had a summer home "The Binnacle" on Cape Cod. His literary work, aside from routine sermonizing, has been abundant and widely distributed. For the past sixteen years usually four sermons from his pen have appeared each year in the volume of the Monday club. Since he came to Newton he has been one of the college preachers at Hanover, and has through all his pastoral life been prominent and active in business organizations of the church. At present he is a valued member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board, and trustee on several others, educational and religious. He has refused several invitations to become a college president or professor, and the fact that he has held but three pastorates is due solely to loyalty to equally loyal churches. He bears the degree of D.D., conferred by Dartmouth. Davis was married in Oct., 1879, to Miss Emma Priscilla Meacham of Burlington, Vt., a graduate of Abbott Academy. Their first child Robert Meacham, born July 28, 1880, enters Dartmouth in 1899. A daughter, Mary Wells, was born Oct. 8, 1884. A second son, Donald died from appendicitis, in 1895, at the age of 8 years. A third son, Edward was born in 1895.

MYRON PARSONS DICKEY, A.K.E.

Myron P. Dickey was born in Derry, N. H., February 19, 1852, the son of David Woodburn Dickey, a farmer, and Sarah (Campbell) Dickey. His life until the time of entering college, was spent at his home in Derry, where he pursued his early studies in the district school, and received his college preparation at the Pinkerton Academy. Dickey was also one of the class pedagogues, and taught during the college course at Londonderry, Lebanon, Conn., and Palmer, Mass. Immediately following graduation he returned to Palmer to assume charge of the grammar school at Three Rivers, in that town, for two terms. Meantime he was elected the first principal of the Emerson Free High School at Hampstead, N. H. This position he assumed in the Spring of '75, and retained it until the Summer of '79, when he accepted a similar position in the High School at New Market, N. H. Before the end of the year he decided to study for the ministry, and in the Fall of 1880 entered the Yale Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1883. Before graduation he had accepted a call to the First Congregational Church in Ludlow, Mass., where he was ordained June 14, 1883. This charge he retained for ten years, until March, '93, when he received a call to the Congregational Church of Milton, N. H., where he is still located.

On August 3, 1876, he was married to Miss Louise R. Shumway, one of the teachers with whom he was associated in Three Rivers. They have three children: Maurice W., born October 1878, is now a member of the class of 1899 at Dartmouth; "whom," Dickey writes, "it will, 'deo volente,' be my pleasure to introduce to my classmates at our twenty-fifth anniversary as the first son of '74 to graduate from our Alma Mater." A daughter, Orinda Sophia, was born June 22, 1883, and a second son, Myron P., Jr. Dickey leaves of indeterminate age, presumably on account of a persistent dislike of figures.

PARKER DICKSON, A.A.Φ.

Parker Dickson was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, September 12, 1853. His father, William M. Dickson, was a lawyer, and graduate of Miami University in 1846, and of the Harvard Law School. Dickson's college preparation was obtained in the schools of Cincinnati, and he joined the class of '74 at Dartmouth in the Fall of 1873, after three years at Miami University. Taking the degree of A.B. with the class of '74, he received that of A.M. from Miami in 1893. After graduation he studied law at his former home, and was admitted to the bar in 1876. In 1877 he was made Assistant United States District Attorney for Ohio, which position he retained until 1881. He was then appointed Legal Adjuster for the Queen and Crescent system of railroads, and has continued to hold that position. He was also for a time Associate Counsel of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad. His office and residence were at Cincinnati until April, 1894, since when they have been at Lexington, Ky. He has never married.

EDWIN GAMAGE EASTMAN, K.K.K.

Edwin G. Eastman, son of the Rev. William H. Eastman, was born in Grantham, N. H., on November 22, 1848. From the district schools of Grantham he went to Kimball Union Academy, at Meriden, where he graduated in '69 at the age of twenty-one. The following year he entered Dartmouth with the class of '74, but did not complete the course. At the end of Junior year he left college and began the study of law in the office of Hon. A. P. Carpenter at Bath, N. H. In 1876 he was admitted to the New Hampshire bar, and that same year represented the town of Grantham, which he called his home, in the New Hampshire Legislature. In 1877 he entered the office of Hon. Gilman Marston of Exeter as clerk, and some years later became a partner in the firm. He was for four years solicitor for Rockingham County, and has been a member of both the State Legislaturé and Senate, in which he was chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He is now and has been for some years Attorney-General of New Hampshire.

Soon after going to Exeter, he was married to Miss Elener E. Dodge of Newport, who died a few years later, leaving a daughter, Helen M., born in 1879. In 1885 he married Miss Margie Follansby of Exeter. A second daughter, Ella F., was born in 1887 or '88.

He received the degree of A.B. in 1889, and is now recorded as a member of the class of '74. A request for further information elicited the reply that he is now a lawyer, residing at Exeter, N. H.

ALBERT EATON, A.A.Ø.

Albert Eaton was born October 15, 1849. His father, Calvin R. Eaton, was at one time a railroad contractor, and in the early seventies was a resident of Grinnell, Iowa. Nothing is known of Eaton's early life, but he began his college course as a student in Iowa College at Grinnell in the class with H. G. Brainerd, with whom he came to Dartmouth to join the class of '74 at the beginning of Sophomore year. His life since graduation is known only from hearsay. For a short time he was in the insurance business with Horne at Portland, Me., but in April, '75, was said to be associated with his father in railroad building in Kentucky. A year later he was a law student at Grinnell, Iowa, where he is said to have practised for a short time. The next report was to the effect that about 1878 he gave up the law, and was again engaged in railroad contracting. A letter from Brainerd, dated May, '89, fixes Eaton in the custom-house in San Francisco on that date, and states that he was married some eighteen months previously, and was living in the city. In a second letter, of March, '95, Brainerd speaks of having visited Eaton at his ranch, some ten miles back of Oakland. Whether his ranch life was coincident with or subsequent to his service in the custom-house is uncertain, but the latter seems probable. The latest information received places Eaton in Honolulu, with a probable interest in sugar manufacturing. Nothing is known of his having any children.

HOWARD STYLES ELDRED, A.K.E.

Howard S. Eldred was born in Milwaukee, Wis., on November 22, 1851. His father, Anson Eldred, was a manufacturing lumber merchant, with extensive mills located at several points in the interior of the State. Eldred prepared for college in the graded schools of Milwaukee, and at the Milwaukee Academy, where he was a classmate of Badgley. Coming to Dartmouth as friends they continued as room-mates through the entire course. Immediately upon his return to Milwaukee after graduation, Eldred entered the lumber business under his father's control. For a time he was located at Little Suamico, Wis., as secretary of the company. In 1878 he became a full member of the firm of Anson Eldred & Son. The mills of this company were located at Styles and Ft. Howard, Wis., with shipping connections at Green Bay. Eldred's residence was divided between these places until 1888, when his permanent home was fixed at No. 2 Waverly Place, Milwaukee. Some time previous to '89 the firm of Anson Eldred & Son was expanded into "The Anson Eldred Company." In 1888 Eldred became interested in banking, and for some years past has been an official of the Citizens' National Bank at Green Bay, Wis. He was married October 5, 1881, to Miss Clara Strong of Green Bay. They have two children, a daughter thirteen, and a son eight years of age.

JOSEPH ELLIOT FENN.

Joseph E. Fenn was born in Boston (?) August 3, 1848. His father, Austin Fenn, was at that time a merchant, but some years later became a farmer of Landgrove, Vt. Fenn completed his preparation at Meriden, and entered with the class in 1870, but left during Freshman year to enter Cornell. He again became a member of the class in the Fall of '71. The first year after graduation he studied medicine, for a part of the term at Hanover, but soon transferred his attentions to the law, entering an office at Manchester, Vt. In connection with his office studies he took the law course at Boston University, where he graduated in 1877. Returning to Manchester, he became a partner in the law firm of Miner & Fenn, in which the senior partner, by reason of his age, took no active part in the business. In 1879 Fenn was elected State's Attorney for the County of Bennington, and was re-elected on the expiration of the term of two years. He was married December 31, 1883, to Miss Ella M. Woodward of Landgrove, Vt. A son, Minor Elliott, was born in 1884. About this time he made a trip through the West, down the Mississippi to Florida. For a time he was Register of Probate, and spoken of as candidate for Judge.

As a relief from the distractions of the law he has become interested in farming, to a degree, it is reported, such as makes it a rival of the law.

[The above is taken in toto from Scott's notes, made not later than '84. All efforts of the present secretary to secure further information have proven fruitless, but it is quite certain that Fenn is still a resident of Manchester, Vt.]

50

JAMES RANDALL FREEMAN, Ψ.Υ.

James R. Freeman, one of the youngest members of the class of '74, was born October 1, 1854, in Biddeford, Me., where his father, William F. Freeman (it is supposed), was a clergyman.

Freeman fitted at the Biddeford High School, with Pierce.

A part of the first four years following graduation is unaccounted for, but in 1878 he was graduated from the National Medical College at Washington, D. C. It is possible that the entire four years were spent in Washington, his course being prolonged by reason of other occupation. One report states that after graduation he was connected with the Surgeon-General's Office in Washington, until he removed to Minneapolis, about 1883 or '84. From that time until his death, in January, 1894, he was a practising physician in Minneapolis, where the same genial nature that endeared him to his classmates gained him a wide circle of friends, with the inevitably attendant professional success. He was a prominent member of the Masons, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Foresters, and Order of United Workmen, in each of which he attained high official positions. The records of the public services at his funeral testify to the sincerity and wide extent of the friendships he had formed. It is not known that he was ever married.

CHARLES OTIS GATES, A. A. Φ.

Charles O. Gates was born October 14, 1852, at Fairfield, Iowa, where his father, the Rev. Charles H. Gates, a graduate of Amherst of the class of 1847, had recently settled. In 1858 his father removed to Washington, and later, in 1863, to Askaloos, in the same State, and in 1871 to Buxton, Me. Gates began his college preparation at Grinnell, Iowa, to continue it at Lewington, Me., and Monson, Mass. While in college he taught at Buxton, Me.; Somerville, Mass., and on "the Cape."

For five years following graduation he taught Latin and Greek at Norwalk, Conn., in the Selleck School. His success here led to his appointment in 1879 as Professor of Latin and Greek in the Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, N. Y. While teaching here he took the course in law at the New York University Law School, graduating in 1885, but never practised. In 1887 he published a school text-book, entitled "Latin Word-Building." On June 7, 1887, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Hoagland, daughter of Dr. C. N. Hoagland, a member of the firm controlling the Royal Baking Powder business, whose liberal donations to the Long Island Hospital Medical College have made him one of the benefactors of medical science. Following his marriage, Gates resigned his position in Adelphi Academy, and entered business with his father-in-law. Two years later, on the reorganization of that company, he became treasurer and advertising manager of the Cleveland Baking Powder Company, a position which he retained until May, '99, when the sale of that company's interests left his future occupation undetermined. He sailed for Europe with his family May 23, '99.

He has three children: Hoagland Gates, born in 1891; Stephen Gates, born in 1892, and Eleanor Gates, born in 1894.

ROLLINS CHAPEL.

WILSON HALL.

JOSEPH STARR HAINES, K.K.K.

Joseph S. Haines, the class-leader and valedictorian, was born February 3, 1852, at Sacramento City, California, where his father, Joseph A. Haines, had diverse business interests as a brewer, lumber merchant, and stock-raiser. In 1854 the family moved to San Francisco. How long Haines lived there is unknown, but his preparation for college was gained largely in the high school of Manchester, N. H., in company with Pettee. He did not teach while in college, but for the first year after graduation had charge of a school in Manchester. The following year he spent in the study of law in the office of Cross & Burnham, at Manchester. He was then for two years a clerk in the National Bank of Redemption, Devonshire street, Boston. Since 1878 he has been engaged in stock-raising on a farm at Storm Lake, Iowa, where he may now be found. He has never married.

HENRY HOWARD HART, K.K.K.

Henry H. Hart was born January 15, 1851, and prepared for college at New London, N. H., being at that time a resident of Methuen, Mass.

On graduation he began the study of law at Lowell, Mass., but soon accepted a position as a teacher at Danvers, Mass. From there he went to Haverhill, where he taught Latin and Greek in the High School for a year. In 1876 he was made principal of the High School at Dover, N. H., after a competitive examination with seventy-five applicants. This position he retained for some years and then resumed the study of law. He was admitted to the N. H. bar in 1881, and opened an office in Dover, where he practised for three years. As the result of certain financial transactions he was compelled to leave Dover, in January, 1884, and has since been heard from only at long intervals. From Dover he went abroad and spent a year or more travelling in Europe and Australia. He was next heard from in Chicago about 1890, where, for a year or more, he was engaged in the subscription-book business, with but little success. Again in '94-'95 he was in Chicago, where Crawford reports him as apparently prosperous. In the interval he had been travelling in the West as far as California as agent for a publishing firm, and in 1891 was married at Minneapolis. In the Fall of 1898 he was discovered by Brown at Minneapolis, in straightened circumstances, and suffering from mental paralysis. Through Brown's generous sympathy and assistance he was placed in an asylum where he would be cared for under proper medical attention. His only child, a son, was born and died in Chicago.

HERMAN LESTER HORNE, Ψ. Γ.

Herman L. Horne, a son of John L., and Hannah (Wallace) Horne, was born at Wolfboro, N. H., February 6, 1852. The same year his father moved to Norway, Me., and established a tannery business, which became one of the largest of its kind in the East. Horne's early education was gained at Norway, and his special college preparation at the South Berwick Academy, with a winter of teaching in Norway, in 1869. His college experiences in teaching were both at Wellfleet on "the Cape." One of the most pleasing, though unrecorded college honors, fell to him in his election as captain of the '74 cadets. Immediately on graduating Horne became the general agent of the Mass. Mutual Ins. Co., for the State of Maine, with offices in Portland. In the latter part of 1876 he was offered, by his father, a partnership in the tannery business and became a member of the firm of John L. Horne & Son. This business was continued for fifteen years. Its size is indicated by this brief newspaper note of February 19, 1887: "The Norway tannery recently shipped 100,000 pounds of pelts to Liverpool and London." At the end of this time the advantages enjoyed by Western tanners produced such sharp competition that this firm transferred its interests from leather to lumber, in which business Horne is still engaged at the same place. Some years since he organized the Norway Water Co., with a capital of $110,000, and also started the Norway Electric Light Co., of which he was for several years president. He was one of the first promoters of the Norway Branch Railroad and of the Norway Shoe Co., which has nearly the largest floor-space of any such company in the country, and is now president of both of these companies. For four years he was president of the Oxford County Agricultural Society, and for several years a trustee of the Norway Savings Bank. On October 18, 1876, Horne was married to Miss Fannie H. Holmes. They have no children.

29

ARTHUR DARWIN JENKINS, A.K.E.

Arthur D. Jenkins, a son of Lewis, and Sarah (Hall) Jenkins, was born on September 6, 1844, at Burke, Vt., where his father was then pastor of the Methodist Church.

Jenkins takes second place in order of age in the class, and his college preparation was not begun until he was nearly of age. He took the full course at St. Johnsbury Academy, from which he entered college. Although he did not teach before, he began such work while in college, at Lunenburg and New Bedford. After graduation he began the study of law in Boston, but after a little less than two years he again took up the life of a teacher, which, although at one time he thought to enter the ministry, continued to be his work until his death. He began at East Burke, and later was at Island Pond, Colebrook, Whitefield, Lunenburg, and West Burke. From about 1880 to 1882 he taught in Mineral, Bureau Co., Ill. Returning to Burke in 1882, he again began teaching. The following January he suffered an attack of appendicitis, which resulted in his death, January 31, 1883. In 1876-7, Jenkins was representative for the town of Burke in the Vermont legislature. On August 16, 1881, he was married at Geneseo, Ill., to Miss Edith A. Pettis. They had one child, Martha, born June 2, 1882.

GEORGE WILLIAM LEE, A.A.Φ.

George W. Lee, a typical illustration of the well-developed New England youth, was born in New Ipswich, N. H., June 20, 1853. His life previous to entering college, though given primarily to study, included sufficient physical activity to thoroughly develop his inherited traits. His father, the Rev. Samuel Lee, and his mother, Lydia Wentworth, each represented long lines of the most rugged New England stock. He fitted for college at the New Ipswich Appleton Academy, in part under (Prof.) John Lord. In college he was business manager of the Dartmouth and a contributor to that ephemeral, but most brilliant literary production Dartmouth has ever known, The Anvil. In the summer of 1872, he suffered a partial sunstroke, the effects of which were aggravated by his work on the college crew. Immediately after graduation he began the study of law at Haverhill, N. H., but in December, 1874, he removed to Indianola, Iowa, where he was admitted to the bar in August, 1875, and began practice. In 1877, he moved to Des Moines, Iowa, entering the firm of Maxwell, Lee & Witter, where he continued in practice until failing health in 1881 compelled him to give up his profession. In 1882, at San Diego, California, where he had gone in search of health, he ran across '74 literature, which led to the discovery that he was living in the house of Nesmith's father. Failing to find in California the relief he sought, he returned to Iowa, and died at Boone, March 10, 1884, from consumption. He was married September 15, 1880, to Miss Clara H. Clarke of Boone, Iowa, but left no children. His professional career, though brief, was of such a character as to make him a marked man in the community, and gave promise of the highest rewards. He had made himself invaluable to his firm and the trusted counsel of a large clientele. While holding no political offices himself, he was frequently the orator at political meetings. He was the promoter of the first lecture course ever given at Indianola, and in his home was a constant student, keeping up his studies of Latin and biblical Greek.

Filled with a high and noble ambition, backed by intensity of purpose and a love of work, he possessed all the qualities that make certain an honorable success in all the walks of life.

The public expressions of sorrow and recognition of his worth from those who knew him, either professionally or personally, all testify to a strength of character and force of mind that justly place Lee among the honor men of the class of '74.

HOMER PIERCE LEWIS, Ψ.Υ.

Homer P. Lewis, a son of George G. and Adeline (Labaree) Lewis, was born July 28, 1849, at his father's farm in Claremont, N. H. His preparatory studies at Meriden, N. H., were supplemented by experience as a teacher during the winters from 1867 to 1870, which included the somewhat famous school at Boxford, Mass. He also had charge of this school for two winters of his college course, and in Junior year taught at East Dennis. For the first year after graduation he was connected with the Pinkerton Academy at Derry. During the following three years he was at the head of the Grammar School at Davenport, Iowa, being promoted in 1878 to the principalship of the High School. Early in 1883 Lewis moved to Omaha, Nebraska, to assume charge of the High School, which at that time numbered 80 pupils. When he resigned this position in 1897 the school had twelve hundred pupils in regular attendance, with eighteen assistant teachers. Public recognition of Lewis' services in bringing about this result was not restricted to congratulations upon the numerical growth, but was especially manifested by expressions commending the high grade of scholarship attained. His resignation of the position after so long and successful a service was to enable him to accept the principalship of the English High School at Worcester, Mass., probably the largest school of its kind in New England, with over eleven hundred pupils. It is only justice to state that the offer of this position came solely as the result of his reputation as a teacher, gained by his work in Omaha. He is already chairman of the High School section of the Massachusetts Association of Teachers. Lewis was married December 26, 1878, to Miss Katharine Roberts, a graduate of Vassar, in 1875.

41

SAMUEL WALKER McCALL, K.K.K.

Samuel W. McCall was born at East Providence, Penn., February 28, 1851. His father, Henry McCall, was a manufacturer of stoves and agricultural implements. His formal preparatory studies were at New Hampton. He taught for three winters of the course and occupied, briefly, a vacancy in the corps of instructors at Kimball Union Academy. He was also one of those who contributed to the fame of The Anvil.

On graduation he began the study of law at Nashua, N. H., and later was in the office of Staples & Goulding, at Worcester, Mass., where, on November 17, 1875, he was admitted to the bar, having previously been a student at the Harvard Law School. Subsequently he formed a partnership with Powers, with offices in the Equitable Building, on Devonshire street, Boston, Mass. This partnership was dissolved a year later. McCall moved his office first to Pemberton square, and then, in 1878, to 23 Court street. During these years, and largely to the present time, his interests have been more literary than legal. He early became a contributor to the magazines, and his literary work has, at times, received high commendation, a critical essay on Rufus Choate, in particular, attracting attention. He did not, however, relinquish his legal business, but has been engaged more as counsel for corporations than in general practice. In 1881, by reason of failing health, he travelled in Europe, in company with Scott. During that trip he was aroused by English injustice to America, and on his return unburdened himself in a magazine article, entitled, "English Views of America," which appeared in the International Review. During the Republican campaign of 1884 he was the instigator of a new paper, called The Stalwart, to which he contributed largely. In 1885 he was one of the company which secured control of the Boston Advertiser, and for some months was editor-in-chief. With the close of the campaign he returned to his law business at 13 School street. Previously, in 1882, he had become a resident of Winchester, Mass. In 1887 and '88, and in 1891, he represented his district in the Massachusetts Legislature, and was during one term chairman of the Judiciary Committee. In 1892-'94-'96 and '98 he was elected as representative for his district in Congress, and in 1888 was a delegate to the National Republican Convention at Chicago. He was also chairman of the Committee on Resolutions in the Massachusetts Republican Convention of 1892 and president of the same convention in 1896. He was married May 23, 1881, to Miss Ella Esther Thompson and has five children: Sumner T., born May 30, 1882; Ruth, born Jan. 19, 1885; Henry, born Aug. 24, 1886; Catherine, born Aug. 10, 1889, and Margaret, born July 20, 1892.

THOMAS MACOMBER, ψ. γ.

Thomas Macomber was the son of Benjamin and Hannah (Meekes) Macomber and was born on May 31, 1847, at Grand Isle, Vt., where his father was a farmer and fruit-grower.

He supplemented his preparatory studies at the New Hampton Institute in Fairfax, Vt., and in the Conference Seminary of Montpelier by teaching. He also was a teacher every winter of the college course, having schools in Franklin, Vt., Chatham, Mass., Arlington, Ill., and Gorham and Lancaster, N. H. Immediately on leaving college he resumed the position which he had held the previous year as principal of the Lancaster Academy where he remained until his death on July 27, 1881. In Jan., 1875, he was married to Miss Alice M. Wood. They had two children, Benjamin, born June 4, 1876, and Claribel, born Aug., 1878. Macomber was descended from a family of Scotch-English blood that settled in Grand Isle about the middle of the 18th century. In his work he manifested the same uniform firmness of character that marked his college life and which everywhere commands respect and regard.

CLINTON HENRY MOORE, K.K.K.

Clinton H. Moore, another farmer's son, was born to Henry and Appia (Bowen) Moore in Piermont, N. H., on Aug. 17, 1847. Before reaching the age of four he suffered the loss of his mother, and while still a child an accident deprived him of the sight of one eye. This loss, by reason of his passion for reading, became, in later years, a serious impediment to his studies. At the age of sixteen he was compelled, by his father's health to relinquish his preparatory studies, then recently begun, and to assume the support of the family. Four years later, following the death of his father he resumed these studies, and in 1868 entered the Kimball Academy, from which he entered college with the class, having done the work of three years in a little over two. While in college he taught during Freshman winter in Piermont. In August, following graduation, he became principal of the graded school at Lyndon, Vt. In June, 1875, failing health led him West, and for eighteen months he was on a ranch in Ruby Valley, Elko County, Nev. He then resumed teaching in Nevada until Aug., 1877, when he accepted an invitation to visit Rolfe at Helena, Mont., to find on his arrival that Rolfe had secured him the principalship of the public school at Deer Lodge. While teaching there he was interested in the organization of the College of Montana and in 1878 was sent East to purchase apparatus, secure plans for buildings, and engage teachers. This institution was opened in Sept., 1878 with Moore as President. Just a year later he relinquished his position and went to Boise, Idaho, where in Mar., 1880, he was made supervisor of the 10th Census for Idaho. In 1881 he had a sharp attack of mining fever which was quickly allayed by a trip to the Wood River country, and Oct., 1881 found him engaged in the book and stationery business in Butte. In 1882 he was elected Superintendent of Schools for Silver Bow County, Mont. In 1883 he moved his business to Anaconda, about thirty miles from Butte, where he was made postmaster several weeks before the town-site was definitely located and the construction of buildings begun. Moore remained in Anaconda nearly three years when in 1886 he again became interested in mining and for four years was superintendent of the Pyrenees gold mine. During this time although a Republican, he was elected to the legislature by a large majority in a strongly Democratic county. In 1890, he went to Mexico as manager of a large silver mine. Since his return soon after to Butte, Mont., where he now resides, he has been engaged in the various ramifications of mining interests. He was married, Aug. 10, 1880, at Helena, Mont., to Miss Emma Jones Hutchins, whom he had known as a schoolmate and neighbor in New Hampshire. They have no children.

WILLIAM WEEKS MORRILL, K.K.K.

William W. Morrill, like the large majority of Dartmouth men, was the son of a farmer, Josiah Robinson Morrill, of Gilmanton, N. H., where he was born, August 31, 1851. Not long afterward his father removed to Belmont, from which place Morrill entered college, on completion of his preparatory course at the New Hampton Literary Institute, New Hampton, N. H. He had then taught one winter at Northfield, N. H., and repeated the experience each winter of the college course, at Sandwich and Lancaster, N. H., and Boxford and Hamilton, Mass. In the Fall and Winter after graduation he taught at Lancaster, N. H., and in the Spring of '75 became principal of the Norwich (Vt.) Academy.

For the school year of '76 and '77 he was headmaster of the Bede Hall School, at Cooperstown, N. Y., from which place he was called in '77 to the position of Instructor in English Language and Literature in the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y. A year later he also became instructor in Latin at St. Paul's School, Troy. These two positions he held until 1882. Meanwhile devoting himself to the study of law as he found opportunity, he was admitted to the bar in 1880. On relinquishing teaching in 1882 he became managing clerk in the office of a legal firm in Troy. Soon after he opened an office for himself at No. 6 First street, where he still continues in practice. While in Norwich he made the acquaintance of Miss Nina M. L. Lewis of that place, to whom he was married on September 14, 1876. They have no children. Aside from his practice, Morrill has given considerable time to the compilation of legal works. The first, published about 1885, was on "Competency and Privileges of Witnesses under the New York Code." The second, which appeared in 1886, was on "City Negligences." A more extensive and ambitious work, entitled "American Electrical Cases," is a digest of all published cases and decisions involving questions in electrical science. It is published in parts by the firm of Nathan Bender, Albany, N. Y., and now comprises six volumes, of which the first appeared in 1894. This work has been received with most flattering commendations. It is described by The New York Law Review as "the most valuable series of cases for active lawyers that has appeared in recent years." Of Morrill's first work the same journal says: "It is one of the most thorough, systematic, and exact pieces of analysis and explanation that has ever come under our notice."

For himself Morrill says, his home in Troy may be recognized as "the little house without mansard or mortgage, and a latch-string marked 'Welcome to '74.'"

EDGAR LEANDER MORSE, A.K.E.

Edgar L. Morse was born May 6, 1850, at St. Johnsbury, Vt., where his parents, Amos Clifford, a machinist, and Susan (Clark) Morse, resided until 1861, when they removed to South Danville, Vt. During his preparatory studies at the St. Johnsbury Academy Morse taught one winter in Danville, and continued his teaching each year in college at various places in Massachusetts. He first entered college with the class of '73. For three years he was a member of that class, and joined '74 Senior Fall after a year's absence. From '74 to '75 he was teacher of Natural Sciences at St. Johnsbury, and the following year taught in the Webster Institute, of Norfolk, Va. In '76 he entered Andover Theological Seminary, from which he graduated three years later, and at once became assistant pastor of the Olivet Mission Church in New York City, which, at that time, under the pastorate of Rev. A. F. Schaufler, was the largest and most prominent mission in New York. Morse remained in New York until 1881, when, on September 21, he was installed pastor of the Congregational Church at Boscobel, Wis. In 1884 he was at Glyndon, on the Northern Pacific Railroad, in the Red River Valley, and later, in 1885, he went to Minneapolis, as pastor of an east-side church. In 1887, after a brief pastorate at Elroy, Wis., he accepted a call to Durand, Wis. Most of these, as well as some other churches to which he ministered, were in the field of the American Home Missionary Society, and his life since leaving New York has been devoted to that work. He is now located at Park Falls, Wis., in a charge which had found few so bold and self-sacrificing as to be willing to accept the inevitable trials and hardships of the work, but for which he offered himself when a call was made for volunteers. He was married November 22, 1887, to Miss Amy C. Kellogg, of Ft. Atkinson, Wis., who, at that time, had been for eight years State President of the W. C. T. U. in Wisconsin and was widely known as a reformer and public speaker in the cause of temperance. The value of her services to that movement has been publicly recognized throughout the West in most flattering terms. They have two children, Miriam and Helen, eight and seven years of age.

OTTO ANDREA NESMITH, A.K.E.

Otto A. Nesmith was born at the residence of his parents, Thomas L. Nesmith, a wholesale merchant of New York City, and Maria Antoinette Gale, on Staten Island, N. Y., March 7, 1852. In 1853 ill health caused his father to remove to San Antonio, Tex. In 1862 his father, being a Union man, although still an invalid, was compelled, after suffering a brief imprisonment, to take refuge in Mexico, where he remained until 1864, when, upon the opening of the Mississippi, Nesmith was sent North and placed in the Pinkerton Academy, at Derry, N. H., from which school he entered college. On graduation he went to San Francisco, and entered the office of the General Auditor of the Central Pacific Railroad, where he remained until 1881, devoting his spare time to the study of law. He then returned East, and continued his law studies at Franklin, N. H., in the office of Hon. Daniel Barnard, under the direction of Judge Nesmith (a Dartmouth trustee) with whom he lived. He completed his studies by a condensed course at the Boston University Law School, where he graduated "cum laude" and received the degree of LL.B. in 1884. Just previous to graduation he took the examination of Suffolk County, Boston, and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar. He then went West, and for a short time practised in Chicago and Minneapolis. In 1888 he again went to California, but soon returned, to accept an appointment as chief clerk of the Signal Bureau in the War Department, at Washington, D. C. Later he was commissioned by the President as Captain in the United States Volunteer Signal Corps, and assigned to duty as assistant to the chief signal officer of the army, which position he now holds, with residence in Washington. He was married March 11, 1885, to Miss Blanche Wheaton Vaughn, a daughter of Daniel W. Vaughn, a banker of Providence, R. I.

They have one daughter, Attola Vaughn Nesmith, born in Washington, December 13, 1889.

45

ALBERT FRANCIS NEWTON, A.A.Φ.

Albert F. Newton was born at Salmon Falls, N. H., April 3, 1848. His father, Elbridge Newton, was a descendant of Richard Newton, who emigrated from England, and settled in Sudbury, Mass., in 1640. His mother was Jerusha E. Stearns, of Grafton, Vt. Newton prepared for college at the academies in Reed's Ferry and Francistown, N. H. In common with so many others, he taught school each year of the college course. In the Fall of '74 he entered Andover Theological Seminary. During the Summers of '75 and '76 he preached in Frankfort and Jonesport, Me. On graduation, in '77, he was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church at Townsend, Mass., where his pastorate of five years was marked by the admission of thirty-one members to the church. In 1882 he became pastor of the Union Church in Marlborough, Mass. He remained there ten years, and in 1892 was called to the Rochester Avenue Congregational Church, in Brooklyn, N. Y. After five years in that city he removed to Haverhill, Mass., where he is now pastor of the Union Congregational Church. In December, 1877, he was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Wright. Their first children were twins, of which one lived but a few days. They now have three children, Alice B. and Florence, students at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, and Helen G., now in the High School. During his Marlborough pastorate Newton made a long trip through Europe, in company with a parishioner and Pettee of '73. During all his pastoral life he has been a frequent contributor to the papers and magazines. While in Brooklyn he became interested in scientific temperance instruction in schools, and was secretary and treasurer of the New York State Central Committee, having this work in charge. As a result of their efforts, such instruction was provided for by legislative enactment in New York State. During this pastorate he published a small paper, The Glad Tidings, in the interests of his church work. He has published many papers on social topics, and has been a frequent lecturer on temperance. He also has given several lectures based on his travels in Europe. In 1888 he delivered two lectures before the Lake View Chautauqua Assembly. Another series of lectures included the subjects "Plymouth and Salem," "Maria Theresa," "Marie Antoinette," "The Church in the Sixteenth Century," "John Calvin," "The Huguenot Emigration," "The Spanish Armada," etc.

FRANK NESMITH PARSONS, A.K.E.

Frank N. Parsons, who came within one of standing at the foot of the class of '74 in order of age, was a son of Rev. Benjamin F. Parsons, a graduate of Bowdoin, in the class of '41, and Mary A. Nesmith. He entered life, and the State of New Hampshire on the third day of September, 1854, at Dover, where his father was pastor of the Congregational Church. After passing through the grammar schools of Dover, he entered Pinkerton Academy at Derry, N. H., for his preparatory course, becoming one of the delegation which entered Dartmouth in 1870. While in college he began teaching, Junior winter at Windham, N. H., and Senior winter he taught at Eastham. In the Fall after graduation he became principal of the High School at Franklin, N. H. The following year ('75-'76) he was sub-master in the High School at Nashua. At the close of the academic year he returned to Franklin, and began the study of law in the office of Hon. Austin F. Pike. The second year of his professional studies found him again in Derry, but he returned to Franklin in '78, where he was admitted to the New Hampshire bar, and, in '79, began practice in partnership with his former preceptor and prospective father-in-law. This partnership was terminated only by the death of Mr. Pike, in 1886. From that date, until his appointment as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire in 1895, he continued by himself the business of that firm in the general practice of law, retaining his offices at Franklin, where he still resides. From 1881 to '86 he was the official State Law Reporter, and in 1889 a member to the New Hampshire Constitutional Convention, in which his position in reference to several important amendments was later endorsed at the polls, not only by his own town, but by his county and the State as well. Parsons has several times been Mayor of the city of Franklin, and was quite recently reëlected a member of the Board of Park Commissioners. While '74 had, more than a decade ago, supplied numerous judges for Western courts, Parsons was the first to find a seat upon the supreme bench. His appointment to the highest court of the State, at the age of forty-one, indicates the reputation he had attained as a lawyer and jurist. On the 26th of October, 1880, he was married to Miss Helen F. Pike, a daughter of Hon. Austin F. Pike, of Franklin. They have no children.

WILLIAM EVERETT PETRIE, θ.Δ.Χ.

William E. Petrie was born in Brooklyn, New York, November 14, 1850, and prepared for college at the Monson Academy. Although he had suffered since childhood from incurable disease, whose manifestation at frequent intervals most seriously interfered with his work, nevertheless, with unwavering purpose and unfailing courage he completed the studies of the full classical course, and graduated with Commencement honors. The strain was such, however, that for three years following graduation he did not feel justified in undertaking any work demanding regular attention at definite times. During these years he was engaged in making mechanical drawings for machinery, inventions, etc. He then took up private teaching, and, finding his health improved, in '78 he became principal of a school at Ridgewood, L. I., where he taught the advanced branches to students fitting for college, sending one boy to Dartmouth.

In 1880 he became the head of a similar school at Lake Grove, Suffolk County, L. I., where he had two assistants, and added surveying to the subjects he taught. At the end of one year his health again forced him to relinquish his work. During these years of teaching he became most favorably known to the teachers of Kings, Queens, and Suffolk Counties, and was an active member of the Teachers' Association in each. He continued to retain not only his membership in all three associations, but also the presidency of one and vice-presidency of another for some time after he gave up active work as a teacher. On leaving his school he resumed his former occupation as a mechanical draughtsman. Soon after this he became a resident of Flatlands, L. I., and it would seem that his health has persistently become worse rather than better, although he was afterwards engaged in the perfection of an invention which promised to be of value. At present he is under medical treatment in a sanitarium at Sonyea, N. Y.

CHARLES HOLMES PETTEE, K.K.K.

Charles H. Pettee is a son of Horace Pettee, and Elizabeth Fairbanks Wilson, and was born February 2, 1853, at Manchester, N. H., where his father was a general merchant. His ancestors for several generations were residents of that section of the State and three of his great grandfathers were soldiers of the Revolution. Pettee was prepared for college at the Manchester High School, and began his career as a teacher Sophomore winter at Welles, Me. On graduation he entered the Thayer School of Civil Engineering at Dartmouth, from which he received the degree of C.E. in 1876. His Summer vacations from '73 to '76 were spent in Coast Survey work, under Prof. Quimby, and in railroad location along the line of the Quebec Central Railroad in Canada. During his second year in the Thayer School he was an instructor in the Agricultural College, and upon graduation, in '76, became also an assistant instructor in the Thayer School. In the Spring of 1877 he was appointed Professor of Mathematics and Civil Engineering in the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. A few years later he was made Dean, both of which positions he still holds, having removed from Hanover to Durham, N. H., in 1893, when the State College was located in that town. While a resident of Hanover he became interested in the problem of obtaining a water-supply for the town, and was the first to suggest the availability of the basin in the town-farm district, back of Balch Hill. At that time he made surveys for a dam and storage-basin, estimated the watershed, and so conclusively demonstrated its adequacy and reliability that the project was endorsed by vote of the precinct. The present lake on this site, which was made possible through financial support from the college, by its lavish supply of pure water bears constant testimony to the soundness of Pettee's judgment and the accuracy of his engineering skill. On the removal of the State College to Durham, he took part in overseeing the construction of the new buildings, waterworks, etc., involving an outlay of over $200,000. He has been actively and practically interested in the improvement of roads and in all agricultural movements. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. He was married July 24, 1877, to Miss Luella Elizabeth Swett, of Hanover. They have four children, Alvera, born in 1881; Horace J., born in 1883; Sarah E., born in 1886, and Charles Swett, born in 1895.

CLARENCE MARSHALL PIERCE, ψ.γ.

Clarence M. Pierce was a son of William B. Pierce, a carpenter, and Hannah A. Berry, of Biddeford, Me., where he was born, June 26, 1852. He was prepared for college at the Biddeford High School, and under private tutors. After graduation it is believed that he taught for a short time, but he very soon became bookkeeper in the store of a relative in Biddeford, certainly as early as '75. It had been his intention to study for a profession. His death, which occurred on January 1, 1876, made the first break in the ranks of '74. From all accounts, it seems to have been due to appendicitis. In the morning, with full consciousness of his approaching end, he distributed keepsakes among his friends, spoke farewell words to each, and then, asking to be raised, as death approached, sang with his mother, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Sixteen members of the class were present at his funeral.

FREDERICK SAILLY PLATT, θ.Λ.K.

Frederick S. Platt, the son of Theodorus and Maretta (Nichols) Platt, was born September 19, 1853, at Enosburg, Vt., where his father was engaged in farming. In 1857 the family removed to Plattsburgh, Vt., where he was fitted for college in the academy. He indulged in teaching during his college course but once, in senior year, at Jericho, Vt. On graduation he began the study of law at Brandon, Vt., and was admitted to the Vermont bar in 1877, since which time he has been a practising lawyer at Poultney. From 1886 to 1888 he was State's Attorney for Rutland County. He has been a member several times of each branch of the Vermont Legislature, and is now State Senator for Rutland County. Since December 1, '98, he has been State Inspector of Finance. He has been more than commonly successful in both his professional work and business enterprises. The latter have been located largely in the West, and have necessitated frequent trips to that part of the country.

On June 9, 1880, he was married to Miss Clara E. Badger. They have three children, Theodora B., born August 18, 1884; George W., born March 5, 1886; and Frederick S., Jr., born May 10, 1890.

SAMUEL LELAND POWERS, A.K.E.

Samuel L. Powers, a representative of the more mature members of the class, was a son of Larned Powers, a farmer of Cornish, N. H., and Ruby (Barton) Powers. He was born in Cornish, October 26, 1848, and was a member of that strong delegation which Kimball Academy, at Meriden, contributed to the class of '74. In conformity with the custom of those days he taught three winters of the college course at Winchester and Lancaster, N. H., and "on the Cape." For a short time after graduation he studied law at Nashua. He was then for a year at the Law School of the New York University, and, after a very brief period in the office of Verry & Gaskell, at Worcester, Mass., was admitted to the bar in November, 1875. The following month he opened an office in Boston, in partnership with McCall, under the firm name of McCall & Powers. This partnership was dissolved at the end of the year, and Powers soon after entered the office of Col. J. H. Benton, where he remained until 1882, when he formed a partnership with his brother, E. B. Powers, of the class of '62. On the dissolution of this firm, in 1886, he became general counsel for the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, since which time he has been engaged as the counsel of this and other electrical corporations. In 1897 he formed a partnership with E. K. Hall, Dartmouth, '92, and M. B. Jones, Dartmouth, '94. This firm is engaged principally in corporation law, representing a large number of corporations. Powers is a member of the University and Algonquin Clubs of Boston and the Newton and Hunnewell Clubs of Newton. Until 1882 he resided in Boston, since when his home has been in Newton, Mass., where he has been a member of both branches of the city government, President of the Common Council, and a member of the School Board. He has recently founded a scholarship at Dartmouth.

On June 21, 1878, he was married to Miss Eva Crowell, a daughter of Prince S. Crowell. They have one son, Leland, born July 1, 1890. Powers has frequently been the orator at memorial and political celebrations, and at times a contributor to the popular magazines. We are in possession of the title of but one such article, "Use of Public Ways by Private Corporations," published in The Arena for May, '92.

53

ALBERT WALTER SCOTT PROCTOR, O. A. X.

Albert W. S. Proctor, the son of Albert Proctor, a native of New Hampshire, and Maria Shurts, was born January 13, 1850, at Chestnut Grove, in the town of Tewkesbury, N. J., where his father was a school-teacher. Proctor, whom '74 affection very appropriately christened "The Judge," was prepared for college at Schooley's Mountain Seminary, New Jersey, and the Mountain Home Institute at Port Jervis, N. Y. He began to teach school as early as 1867, and continued this training until 1870, not only in the public schools, but also in the seminary where he was fitted. During the college course he taught each winter both public and private schools. On graduation he at once began the study of law at the Law School of the University of the City of New York and in the office of Gilbert Sayres at 397 Fulton street, Brooklyn. The following May (1875) he received the degree of LL.B., and was admitted to the bar, thereby making the record for the class of '74 for speed in acquiring a profession. In August of the same year he opened an office in East New York, then a suburb of Brooklyn, and the same month won his first case. It should be said that the Judge's law studies were begun at the age of 15, and were not entirely neglected during his years of teaching, which began when he was 17, or while preparing for college. In 1877 he removed his offices from East New York to 397 Fulton street, Brooklyn, where he has since continued in the successful practice of his profession. More than any member of the class, so far as our knowledge goes, he has escaped those tell-tale marks which score the passing years. He was married in December, 1877, to Mrs. Ruhamah Du Bois. He has no children of his own. Since 1880, with his wife and family, he has resided at 24 Herkimer street, Brooklyn.

54

JAMES WALLACE PUTNAM, M.D.

James W. Putnam was born August 29, 1849, at Amherst, N. H. His parents, Barnes Bigelow Putnam, a carpenter and builder, and Lucy (Bills) Putnam, soon after removed to Nashua, where Putnam was fitted for college in the high school. In accordance with the almost universal custom he supplemented his college training by three winters of school-teaching at Princeton, Mass., Litchfield, and Hillsborough Bridge, N. H. Immediately after graduation he began the study of medicine at Hanover, and received his degree from the New Hampshire Medical College in the Fall of '77. Without delay he opened an office in Lyons, N. Y., where he has remained since, as the success which attended his first years has increased with such persistency and in such large degree as to give no chance for discontent.

His retiring disposition has not served to hide his worth from his fellow-townsmen. He was for five years Mayor of Lyons, and non-continuance in this office was due solely to his refusal of another term. For thirteen years he was United States Pension Examiner. He has held all the offices in the gift of the County Medical Society, as well as that of Vice-President of the New York Central Medical Association. He has been for a number of years President of the Lyons Electric Light and Power Company, and is a director in several manufacturing corporations in Lyons. Ill health some years since forced him to contract his professional work, and led to his becoming interested in business enterprises and agricultural matters. He owns a large farm at Lyons and a ranch in Kansas, which he carries on by way of amusement primarily, though, unlike most amateur farmers, he also makes them a financial success. The summer of 1892 he spent travelling in Europe for pleasure and health. During the last year or two his sufferings from his old-time enemy, asthma, have so decreased as to afford hope that he will again be able to meet the demands of an extensive practice, which has always been at his command. Putnam has never married, but is beginning to appreciate his mistake, although his beautiful home in Lyons has had a worthy mistress in his sister.

CHARLES ELIHU QUIMBY, A.A.Φ.

Charles E. Quimby, born in New Ipswich, N. H., June 21, 1853, is the elder son of Elihu Thayer Quimby, of the class of 1851, and Nancy Aldana Cutler. His preparatory studies were begun at the New Ipswich Appleton Academy, of which his father was principal from 1851 to 1864, and continued, after removal to Hanover on his father's appointment as Professor of Mathematics, in private schools and at the Norwich Academy. In the Fall of '74 he became principal of the High School at Gardner, Mass., and the following July began the study of medicine at Hanover, as the pupil and surgical assistant of Dr. A. B. Crosby. In the Spring of '77 he went to New York to complete his medical course, where he received the degree of M.D. from the University of the City of New York in February, 1878. The following month he entered the surgical service of Bellevue Hospital. This service of eighteen months he completed October 1, 1879, and began the practice of medicine at Great Falls (Somesworth), N. H., in February, 1880. In October, '82, he returned to New York, where he has since continued in practice. In October, '84, he became the assistant of Dr. A. L. Loomis, a relation which continued until the death of Dr. Loomis in '95. In '85 he was appointed quiz master of medicine in the Medical Department of the New York University. A year later he was made lecturer, and subsequently assistant and adjunct professor to the chair of medicine, then held by Dr. Loomis. At the death of Dr. Loomis in '95 he was appointed clinical professor of medicine, which position he now holds. From 1890 to '95 he was assistant visiting physician to Bellevue Hospital, and since '95 has been visiting physician to the City Hospital. He is a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, the County Medical Society, and the American Climatological Association, of which he was for one term Vice-President. He is now President of the Society of Alumni of Bellevue Hospital, and a member of the A.A.Φ. and University Clubs.

His contributions to medical literature, which may be found in "Buck's Handbook of Universal Medical Sciences" and the "American System of Medicine," as well as in medical journals, have been almost entirely on diseases of the heart and lungs. In '84 he made a trip to the Pacific Coast, and in '90 to Europe. On September 28, 1881, he was married to Miss Julia M. Cobb, of Hanover. They have two children, Aldana R., born June 20, 1888, and Dorothy M., born February 21, 1892.

62

ROBERT GATES REED, θ.Λ.Χ.

Robert G. Reed is a son of Joseph Reed and Ann J. Howard, and was born November 10, 1850, at Lonsdale, R. I., where his father was connected with the cotton manufacturing interests. Reed was fitted for college at Lonsdale and at the New Bedford High School. He did not entirely miss the Dartmouth man's best training, have taught Junior Winter in Berlin, Mass. On graduation he began the study of medicine at the homeopathic school of the Boston University, from which he received his degree in 1877. He then began practice at New Bedford, Mass. He remained there until 1880, when he removed to Woonsocket, R. I., where he still continues in practice. While in New Bedford he was several times a member of the City Council, a member of the Board of School Committee, and of Park Commissioners, acting as secretary and treasurer for this latter board. He is a member, and, in 1895, was President of the Rhode Island Homeopathic Medical Society. He is also a member of the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynecological Society, and the American Institute of Homeopathy. In 1896 he was appointed by the Governor of Rhode Island Medical Examiner for District No. 6. He is also connected with many secret orders, as the Masons, Knights Templars, Odd Fellows, Knights of Honor, New England Order of Protection, and others. He was married on October 18, 1880, to Miss Eudora C. Libby. They have no children.

SAMPSON AUGUSTUS REED, O. A. X.

Sampson A. Reed, son of Elisha B. Reed, a merchant of Boston, was born in that city on December 8, 1849, and resided there until 1855. His college preparation, as obtained in the schools of Hebron, Me., was improved by experience as a pedagogue in nearly a score of schools. His college course, which began with the class of '74, sophomore Fall, also found him teaching each winter. For a time after graduation he was engaged in introducing school-books, but late in the Fall of '75 began the study of law in Minneapolis, Minn., where he was admitted to the bar, and has ever since remained in the practice of his profession, with collateral interests in real estate and mining. In 1880 he was a director and secretary of a gold-mining company. Rumor alone supplies further details, but the report seems well founded, that Reed has manifested unusual business traits, that have secured him large financial success. He was married November 7, 1877, to Miss Abbie Eells, of Belfast, Me. They have one daughter, Abbie M., born June 21, 1887.

JAMES BURTON RICHARDSON, A.K.E.

James B. Richardson was born February 20, 1850, at Corinth, Vt., where his father, Daniel M. Richardson, was engaged in farming. During his preparatory course at Barre, Vt. Academy, he began teaching in the winter of 1865, and so continued without a break up to and through his college course. On graduation he returned to Barre as principal of the Academy. At the end of two years his health forced him to take absolute rest. By the Fall of 1877 he was sufficiently recovered to enter the Union Theological Seminary in New York, from which he graduated in May, 1880. Declining attractive offers of pastorates in Boston, Mass., and Albany, N. Y., he entered upon the missionary work of the Congregational Church and was sent to Kansas to become pastor of the church in Hiawatha, where his entire ministerial life has been spent and attended with most gratifying success. In September, 1890, upon recommendation of (now) Governor Morrill of Kansas, he was appointed by President Harrison, United States Consul at Matamoras, Mexico. This position he held until 1893, when, returning to Hiawatha, he resumed his former charge. While in Mexico, his success in adjusting certain matters that gave promise of provoking international complications received most flattering recognition from President Diaz, who referred to Mr. Richardson by name, according him due honor in his annual message of December, 1890. It was during Richardson's term of service that the "Gazzo Revolution" occurred and he is one of a trio to whom those best acquainted with the facts give the largest share of credit for ridding the Rio Grande Valley of its bandit element. Aside from his pastoral work he has become known in his State as a public speaker on educational topics, and in 1886 was honored by the State University with the degree of D.D. He has never married. His health, which at times has hampered his work, is now completely restored.

WILLIAM STONE RIX, K.K.K.

William S. Rix, another of '74's farmer's sons, was born to Daniel and Florella (Stone) Rix, December 14, 1847, assumedly at some place in the United States. He was one of the Meriden contingent that formed so strong an element in the class, and like most of the others had fixed his preparatory studies by teaching, a process which he continued each winter of the college course. Just what Rix did the first year out of college is unknown, but in 1875 and 1876 he was studying something, possibly law at Harvard, although he gives his residence from 1875 to 1878 as Yarmouth. It seems probable that a High School which he taught for two years was in Yarmouth. It is certain that since about 1876 he has been uninterruptedly engaged in teaching. From 1879 to 1888 he was in Cincinnati, O., as instructor in a preparatory school, and from 1889 to 1893, in a similar position at Buffalo, N. Y. In 1893 he removed to Utica, N. Y., where he established a private school at 343 Genesee street, which is distinctly a college preparatory institution, although having a lower-grade course as well as courses for special students. Rix was married in November, 1877, to Miss Sarah Mathews Taylor. They have had four children, of whom three are living. Malcolm W., born July 19, 1880; John B., born March 24, 1882; Genevieve S., and Evelyn M., born August 15, 1890. The last died when ten-months old.

Rix has been at times a public speaker and lecturer and recently delivered a lecture on "Science Day," before the New Century Club of Utica.

HERBERT PERCY ROLFE, K.K.K.

Herbert P. Rolfe was born in Tunbridge, Vt., on August 30, 1849. His parents were Gustavus Rolfe, a lawyer, and Eliza (Marston) Rolfe. He began teaching in 1865, and after irregular attendance on district schools attended the Essex Academy for two terms in 1867 and 1868, and completed his preparation for college by three terms at Kimball Union Academy. It would seem that some time previously his father had become a farmer, as Rolfe himself includes among his places of preparatory study "the farm and wood pile." His future success is foreshadowed even at this time by his own statement of "while fitting for college I paid my own way and gave $100 a year to my father." During the college course he did the same, in part by teaching each winter. From 1874 to 1876 he was assistant superintendent of the Ohio Institute for the Blind at Columbus, and from 1876 to 1879 superintendent of schools and principal of the High School in Helena, Montana. During the years 1875 and 1876 he was also a law student in the office of Ex-Governor Edgerton in Akron, Ohio, and in 1877 and 1878, in the office of Saunders and Cullin in Helena. He was admitted to the bar in 1879 and began practice in Fort Benton. He removed to Great Falls, Montana, in 1884. There is a note referring to his having been connected with The Butte Daily Miner for a short time in 1879. Disregarding chronological order, these facts may be given: Rolfe was for a time Probate Judge of Cascade county, Mont.; president of the Bar Association of the same county; attorney for the Great Falls Town-site Co.; a director of the St. Paul and Manitoba R. R., and proprietor and editor of the Great Falls Daily Leader. He made many investments in real estate which so increased in value as to give large returns, so that at the time of his death, Rolfe, if not the richest man in the class, certainly had acquired the largest fortune obtained by unaided efforts. He was married August 8, 1876, to Miss Martha A. Edgerton of Akron, Ohio. They had several children, of which these names are known: Mary P., born December 25, 1877; Harriet L., born October 24, 1879; Helen M., born January 30, 1882; Lucia I., born February 23, 1884; Herbert E., and Martha E., born January 22, 1886, and Hester, born December 18, 1889. In 1886 he celebrated the anniversary of his wedding in an elegant mansion recently built on the outskirts of Great Falls, the city for which he had surveyed the site. His death occurred on March 28, 1895.

HENRY GERRISH SANBORN, K.K.K.

The class records give no information concerning Sanborn previous to his entering college beyond the date of his birth, January 3, 1852, and that his father, Hazen Sanborn, was a resident of New Hampton. In Senior year he was recorded as coming from Auburn, N. H. The class reports after graduation state that in 1875 he was teaching Greek, Latin, and German at Placerville, Cal. On November 10, 1876, he sailed for Australia, with the intention of going into business. In 1877 he was a private tutor on a stock-farm with address at Conabarabran, N. S. W. In 1879 he returned to America, visited N. H., and then went to Montana, where for a time he was near Rolfe. In 1882 he was engaged in stock-raising in Montana. In 1885 he was married to Miss Agnes J. Bryant. His death occurred September 15, 1886, at Diamond Springs, Colorado.

CLARENCE WATKINS SCOTT, K.K.K.

Clarence W. Scott, son of Charles A. and Betsey (Watkins) Scott, was born on August 20, 1849, in Plymouth, Vt. In this town his father, a graduate of Castleton Medical College, was a practising physician for over fifty years. Scott began his preparatory studies at the Chester Academy in 1865. After three terms there he was in the Randolph Normal School for one term in 1867, the Black River Academy two terms in 1868, and Kimball Union Academy in 1869 and 1870, where he joined the Dartmouth delegation. He began teaching winter schools as early as 1866, and continued without break until Senior year. He too was in Boxford. During Senior year, while acting with Crawford as college librarian, he published an article in the Dartmouth, proposing a plan for consolidating the college and society libraries, which at that time were three distinct collections with separate catalogues and under independent administrations. This plan, which was adopted by the "Social" and "Frater" societies, approved by the faculty and accepted by the trustees, led to his appointment on graduation as college librarian, saddled with the task of amalgamating the three libraries. To this almost hopeless undertaking he devoted himself for the next four years. While a rapid or even complete rearrangement of the books in the old quarters was impossible, Scott mapped out the general plan of classification and started a card catalogue of the entire collection. During this time he began the study of law and also taught in the Agricultural College. After leaving the library in 1878 he was for a year and a half in the law office of Walker & Godard at Ludlow, Vt., and was admitted to the Vermont bar at Woodstock, in December, 1879. Having given instruction in the Agricultural College at intervals from 1878 to 1881, in that year he was appointed Professor of English Language and Literature. This position he still holds as expanded to include History and Political Science since the removal of the State Institution to Durham. Scott has published some articles on "Libraries" and "Agricultural Education" and rewrote the article on "Agriculture" in the last edition of the "International Encyclopædia." In 1888 he spent four months in European travel. He was married at Duluth, Minn., on April 30, 1888, to Miss Hattie Maria Field, daughter of C. A. Field, formerly of Hanover. They have two children, Charles Field, born January 23, 1891, and Susie Helen, born July 30, 1895.

62

FREDERICK CHESTER SOUTHGATE, ψ. γ.

Frederick C. Southgate was born to Robert and Mary (Swan) Southgate at Ipswich, Mass., on January 28, 1852. His father was a minister and graduate of Bowdoin in 1826. Until the age of sixteen he attended the schools at Ipswich, and then, for about a year, was a student at the Wethersfield Commercial College. From that school he went to Phillips Academy, Andover, to become a classmate with Taylor and Cogswell. Southgate never indulged in teaching, but after graduation at once began the study of law in the office of Warren C. French, at Woodstock, Vt., where he was admitted to the bar in December, 1876. His position in the office was changed by this event from that of student to partner. This partnership with Mr. French, who within the year became his father-in-law, was broken only by the death of the senior member. Since that time Southgate has continued his professional work alone. He was married October 31, 1877, to Miss Anna S. French of Woodstock, a daughter of his legal partner. Her death occurred in 1895, as the result of acute pneumonia. They had two children, Frances Swan, born September 7, 1878, and Richard Steele, born August 4, 1885. On June 24, 1897, Southgate was married to Miss Helen E. Marsh, a daughter of Owen T. Marsh, Esq. We are confident that he has held official positions of honor and trust conferred by his fellow townsmen, for he is the same genial fellow as of old, but his report is silent upon such points.

GEORGE HURTER STEVENS, A.K.E.

George H. Stevens was born at the home of his parents, George and Elizabeth (Kimball) Stevens in Mount Vernon, New Hampshire, July 19, 1853. His father, a graduate of Dartmouth in 1849, was a lawyer, and soon after the birth of his only son, removed from New Hampshire to Lowell, Mass., where he became one of the leaders of the bar, and was for some time district attorney. Stevens was prepared for college at the Lowell High School. While in college he was, for two winters, a teacher in Massachusetts. In the Fall of 1874 he took charge of the Academy at Colebrook, N. H., but at the end of one term returned to Lowell and began the study of law. Late in 1875 he dropped that work for studies abroad. In January, 1876, he became a member of the University of Leipzig, where he devoted special attention to history. Subsequently he was a student at the universities of Göttingen, Leipsig, and Geneva, spending in all two and a half years of study at the several European universities. Returning to Lowell in 1878, he began the practice of law, in which he was associated with his father until the latter's death in 1884. Since then he has had no partner. He now holds the position of public administrator, of bail commissioner, and has recently been appointed examiner of titles, under the new registration law. He has been interested in real-estate loans, and had charge of the Wentworth estate, given to Dartmouth while it was growing to the half-million mark. January 30, 1895, he was married to Mrs. Sarah E. Jenkins (née Clarke) of Brooklyn, N. Y. They have one daughter, Esther Elizabeth, born January 4, 1899.

FRANK SHERWIN STREETER, A. K. E.

Frank S. Streeter, son of Daniel and Julia W. Streeter, was born in Charleston, Vt., August 5, 1853. He received his early education in the public schools and his preparatory course at the Academy in St. Johnsbury, Vt. He first entered Bates College as a Freshman in 1870, but joined the class of '74 at Dartmouth in sophomore year. For the first year after graduation he was principal of the High School at Ottumwa, Iowa, and in July, 1875, entered the law office of A. P. Carpenter of Bath, N. H. Two years later he was admitted to the New Hampshire bar in March, 1877. After six months devoted to the practice of law in Orford, N. H., he removed to Concord and formed a partnership with J. H. Albin, which continued until September, 1879, when he became a law partner of William M. Chase, under the firm name of Chase & Streeter. This partnership was dissolved in 1891 on the appointment of Mr. Chase as associate justice of the Supreme Court. In 1892 Streeter formed another partnership which since 1894 has been Streeter, Walker, & Hollis. In 1885 he represented Ward 4 of Concord in the legislature, and was a delegate to the National Republican Convention at St. Louis in 1896. In 1887 he became connected with railroad litigation in New Hampshire on behalf of the Concord & Montreal R. R., of which he was elected clerk and one of the general counsel in 1891. He continued to act for that corporation until its amalgamation with the Boston and Maine, when he became active counsel for the latter corporation in the State of New Hampshire. Since 1887 he has represented railroad and other corporations before the legislature.

Streeter is now in his second term as trustee of the college, where his work has been specially devoted to the real-estate interests. He was married November 14, 1877, to Miss Lillian Carpenter, daughter of Hon. A. P. Carpenter, from 1881 to 1896 an associate, and since 1896, chief justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court. They have two children, Julia, born in 1878, now a student at Bryn Mawr College, and Thomas Winthrop, born in 1883, now in St. Paul's School, Concord.

RICHARDSON HALL.

BUTTERFIELD HALL.

HARRY JORDAN TATTERSON, ψ. γ.

Harry J. Tatterson, son of John and Elizabeth (Jordan) Tatterson, was born on November 12, 1853, at Saco, Me., where his father was engaged in manufacturing. Two years later the family moved to Lawrence, Mass.; then in 1866 to Lowell, and in 1868 to Methuen. Tatterson's early training and college preparation were obtained in the public schools of these three cities. During Junior and Senior winters he was engaged in teaching at East Chatham, Mass., and Langdon, N. H. For something over two years after graduation he taught in a boarding-school at Newburyport, Mass., at the same time studying law. He afterward continued his law studies at So. Berwick, Me., and in 1879 began practice at Biddeford, where he later was City Solicitor for two years. After six years of professional work he gave up the law and accepted the position of master of the Birch Street Grammar School. This position he held for ten years, and for the first seven years of that period was also master of the city evening school. Finding himself in comfortable circumstances after the death of his father in 1892, he gave up the evening school, but retained the other position until just two months prior to his death, which occurred at Kennebunkport, where he was spending the Summer, July 22, 1895, from apoplexy. He never fully recovered from an attack of grippe in 1891, and soon after began to manifest signs of spinal disease which slowly increased for the following four years. On April 12, 1883, he was married to Miss Estelle Morris. They had two children, Elizabeth L., born January 30, 1884, and John Morris, born January 13, 1886.

Tatterson was a Royal Arch Mason and a Knight Templar, and at the time of his death had attained a popularity and such universal friendship as are seldom equalled. A most impressive and touching tribute to his memory was the eagerness with which scores of the French-Canadian millhands, who had been his pupils in the evening school, on the day of his funeral, sought during their noon hour to look once more upon the face of their friend.

ARTHUR FAIRBANKS TAYLOR, A.A.Φ.

Arthur F. Taylor was the youngest son of Samuel H. Taylor, LL.D., for so many years the illustrious principal of Phillips Academy, at Andover, Mass., and Caroline (Parker) Taylor. He was born at Andover, December 10, 1853, and received his preliminary education under his father's care, graduating from "Phillips" in 1870. On leaving college he at once took up the study of chemistry and physics in the University of Göttingen, where he received the degree of Ph.D., in June, 1876. Soon after, upon his return to America, he was appointed Professor of Natural Sciences to the Woodruff scientific expedition. In 1878 he became assistant to the Professor of Physics in the University of Pennsylvania. In 1881 he was made Professor of Chemistry in the Case School of Applied Sciences in Cleveland, O. In connection with the work of organizing that school, in which Taylor had a prominent part, he again visited Germany, to purchase the apparatus for his own and associated departments. Early in June, 1883, he resigned his position in that school and came to New York, where, at the house of an intimate friend, Dr. E. D. Pape, heart disease of some years' duration culminated in his instant death, June 28, 1883. His father, mother, and a brother had all met death from the same disease, and Taylor had fully expected that the end for himself would come in a similar manner. He was a man of elegant presence and engaging manners, a skilful musician, gifted in conversation and belles lettres, and an adept in the use of his pencil and crayon. The Cleveland Leader said, at the time of his death: "As an instructor he possessed the power of engaging his pupils and carrying them with him through the course, so that their interest never flagged, and at the same time gaining their friendship in such manner as to strengthen his influence. Recognizing the difference between a chemist and a teacher, he gained the reputation of being the two in one." He was never married, and his body was taken to Andover, to rest beside his parents and brother.

MARK WARD, A.K.E.

Mark Ward, the oldest member of the class, and de jure the father of '74 boys, is a son of Richard and Mary (Hull) Ward. His father was a farmer of Andover, Vt., where Ward was born on October 3, 1843. He began his college preparation in Bernardstown, Mass., and completed that work at Meriden, where he joined the Kimball crowd that came to Dartmouth in 1870. His first experience as a teacher was in '66. This was repeated in '67 and '68, and during the winters of Sophomore and Junior years. The first class report (May, '75) located him in Minnesota, but during '75 and '76 he taught five terms as principal of the academy at Chester, Vt. In October, '77, in company with an invalid sister, he sailed for France, intending to be gone some months. On his return, in '78, he began the study of law, and in the Fall of '79 was again a teacher in Putney, Vt. During the Fall of 1880 he taught mathematics at Saxton's River, and the following Winter was teaching at Putney. In May, 1881, he entered the law office of Judge James Barrett at Rutland. For the years of '83 and '84 he was cashier of a bank at Canton, S. D. In 1884 he went to Kimball, S. D., and engaged in business as a broker. He had been admitted to the bar in Dakota in 1883, and the last class report ('91) states that he also practised law during the five years he remained at Kimball, during which time ('84-'85) he was also a member of the Dakota Legislature. In '90 he returned to the East and became special agent of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company with offices in Brooklyn, N. Y. Soon after he returned to Putney, where he has since been engaged in the practice of law. He has held many local offices, and is now Town Clerk and Treasurer, Overseer of the Poor, and Superintendent of Schools. He was married July 2, 1885, to Miss Nellie F. Barnard of Putney. Mrs. Ward died February 20, 1888, leaving no children.

ALBERT PUFFER WARREN, Ψ.Υ.

Side by side on the benches in chapel and class-room sat the class-father and the class Benjamin, Warren, one of the youngest men who ever graduated at Dartmouth. Albert P. Warren was born April 10, 1855, a son of Aaron Russell and Elizabeth (Puffer) Warren, at Lowell, Mass., where his father was engaged in business. He was a pupil in the Lowell High School at the time the family moved to St. Paul, when he entered the high school of that city, from which he graduated, at the age of fifteen, into Dartmouth. Despite his youth, which his features could not conceal, he began teaching the Winter of Sophomore year, and repeated that experience the following two years, going in Senior Winter to Arlington, Ill. After graduation he taught Latin and Greek for four months in the St. Paul High School, and then began the study of law, to be admitted to the bar in December, 1877, and enter upon active professional life. In April, '78, he started in search of adventure in the far West, and was satisfactorily successful. Going into eastern Montana, he was one of the founders of Miles City, where he was lawyer, judge, and cattle-ranchman. He and Rolfe (Scott's notes) were admitted to the Montana bar on the same motion. At this time, while law was his profession, ranching was his occupation. After remaining at Miles City for a year, he moved to Ft. Custer, where he lived for two years. In 1881, having found the absence of law an insuperable obstacle to the successful raising of cattle, when one is hampered by even a spasmodic respect for human life, he returned to St. Paul, and became the junior partner with his former preceptors in the legal firm of Lamprey, James & Warren. Three years later he withdrew from general practice, to devote his attention to the legal business and credits of a wholesale house, in which he had purchased an interest. In '89, in company with his wife, he spent the Winter in California, the Spring in the South, and the Summer and Fall on the New England Coast. In '94 he disposed of his business interests, but continues as attorney for the largest boot and shoe firm in the Northwest.

Warren was married September 7, 1881, to Miss Elizabeth Stevens, of Lowell, Mass., a sister of his classmate, Stevens, and daughter of George Stevens, Dartmouth, '49.

72

DANIEL FREDERIC WEBSTER, A.A.Φ.

Daniel F. Webster, whose father, Frederick B. Webster was a farmer, was born at Litchfield, Conn., on March 14, 1853. He was fitted at the academy in Thomaston, Conn., and on entering college at once began to apply his knowledge by teaching each Winter. For the first three years after graduation he was principal of the high school at Thomaston, meantime studying law in the office of A. P. Bradstreet. He was admitted to the bar in 1877, and at once began practice at Waterbury, Conn., where he lived until his death, October 31, 1896. On June 26, 1879, he was married to Miss Elizabeth R. Fox of Thomaston, a graduate of Vassar. They had four children: Bradford, born in February, '81; Frederick B., born in August, '82, and Benjamin and Howard, whose ages are not known. Webster was a descendant in the seventh generation of Lieut. Robert Webster, who was a member of the committee appointed by the General Court in 1673 "to view the lands at Matlatuck and report whether they were suitable for a plantation." In 1880 he was Clerk of the City Court, and in 1883 of the Police and District Court. He was a member of the Common Council in 1887, an Alderman in 1888 and '89, and school visitor for several years.

In 1891 he was elected Mayor by a large majority, being the first Republican to hold that office in Waterbury in twenty-three years. In 1894 he represented the Fifth District in the State Senate, and was chairman of the Committee on Corporations, and in 1895 was appointed Prosecuting Attorney in the City Court. His death called forth the most flattering tributes to his character and ability, as well as his services to the city and State.

12

WILLIAM ROBBINS WHITE, A.K.E.

William R. White, son of Joseph A. White, a merchant, and Ellen (Proctor) White, was born in Cavendish, Vt., October 31, 1849. His education, after the district-school period, was at Black River Academy in Ludlow, Vt., until he joined the Meriden men, with whom he graduated from Kimball Academy, and entered Dartmouth. In college he also was one of the instructors of youth for the first three winters. He went directly from his academic course to the Dartmouth Medical College, but spent the last year of his professional studies at Harvard, where he received the degree of M.D. in June, '77. The following September he began an eighteen-months' service in the Rhode Island Hospital in Providence, and in December, '79, opened an office in that city, where he has since remained. On completion of his service as interne, he at once became attached to the out-patient service, and for the past fifteen years has been visiting physician to the same hospital. He is a member of the American Medical Association; American Academy of Medicine; Rhode Island Medical Society, of which he has been secretary; the Providence Medical Association, of which he has been both secretary and president, and the Harvard Alumni Association.

His literary work comprises numerous papers read before the above societies, and published in the medical journals. He has also been a member of the Providence School Committee for the past six years. On December 10, 1879, he was married in Grace Church, Providence, to Miss Helen G. Farmer of Providence, a cousin of Lewis G. Farmer, Dartmouth, '72. They have four children: Howard J., age eighteen; William Edward, age fifteen; Donald P., age thirteen, and Margaret H., age twelve. The older son is ready to enter college. White's address is No. 7 Greene street.

REUBEN BEAN WRIGHT, K.K.K.

Reuben B. Wright, another of '74's sturdy farmer's sons, was born to Elihu and Ruth (Bean) Wright, in West Glover, Vt., on April 12, 1848. He began his college preparation at the Orleans Liberal Institute, continued it by teaching in the winters of '67-'68-'69, and then joined the Kimball contingent at Meriden. During the college course he still kept up his winter's training in the district school. After graduation he was for two years in Yale Theological Seminary and then entered Andover Theological Seminary, where he again graduated (in '77) with several other '74 men. On December 26th following, he was ordained to the ministry at Poplar Grove, Ill., but a few months later he took up home-missionary work in Minnesota, being located at Dexter and Long Meadow. At the end of three years (1880) he accepted a call to the church at Crystal Lake, Ill. Some years later trouble with his throat compelled him to seek the climate of Colorado, where for eleven years he labored in several Congregational churches. He was then for five years in Pueblo, Col., at the end of which time he organized the Tenth Congregational Church in Denver, and in less than three years built a church edifice and made the church self-supporting. Then for two years he was General Missionary of the Congregational churches in Colorado and Wyoming. In 1893 he went to Boise City, Idaho, and organized the church there, of which he is still the pastor. On September 5th, 1877, he was married to Miss Alice A. Wood, of Fair Haven, Vt. They have two daughters, Edith Alice, aged twenty, and Margaret Helen, aged seventeen.

SCIENTIFIC CLASS

HENRY BROCKWAY, Σ.Δ.Φ.

Henry Brockway, son of John and Ann (Gile) Brockway, was born April 23, 1852, at Pomfret, Vt., where his father was engaged in farming. After a course at Meriden and the Norwich, Vt., Academy, he entered the Chandler School in the Fall of 1870. His report, rendered in 1898, gives no details of his life after graduation, merely stating that he is a farmer, engaged in raising horses. His residence, as learned from the college list of graduates is still at Pomfret. On October 8, 1884, he was married to Miss Flora A. Doyle. They have four children, David J., born November 5, 1885; Andrew L., born November 13, 1877; William L., born April 22, 1889, and James H., born August 18, 1892. In 1888 Brockway was a member of the Vermont Legislature, and has been for several years a member of the School Board in Pomfret.

AZRO WHITMAN BURNHAM, Σ.Δ.Φ.

Azro W. Burnham, the son of James Burnham, a farmer of Norwich, Vt., was born in that town on July 25, 1849. His preparatory studies were pursued in the district schools and at Norwich Academy. But little is known in detail of his life after graduation. He went very soon to Moorehead, Minn., and entered upon his profession as a Civil Engineer. His business increased very rapidly until in the Fall of '87 he found himself so broken in health from prolonged overwork that he made arrangements to dispose of his business. But a few days before the transaction would have been completed Burnham committed suicide when alone in his office. His death occurred about Oct. 1, 1887.

GEORGE JOHNSON CARR, Φ. Z. M.

George J. Carr was born November 28, 1850, in Enfield, N. H. He is a son of John P. Carr, a manufacturer, and Emily (Cochrane) Carr. His home was in Enfield until his thirteenth year, and afterwards at Andover until graduation. His preparatory education was gained at Andover and Colby Academy in New London. While in college he taught one Winter in Palmer, Mass. After graduation he at once began the study of law in Andover, N. H., with John M. Shirley, Esq. After a year there he continued his studies at Lynn, Mass. On admission to the bar in '77 he entered upon practice at Lynn, in partnership with William W. Niles, in whose office he had studied, and where he has since remained. He was married March 9, 1880, to Miss Flora A. Niles, a daughter of Samuel D. Niles. They now have two children, Shirley N., born July 27, 1882, and Katharine, born September 15, 1889.

JOHN WINTHROP FLANDERS, Φ. Z. M.

John W. Flanders is a son of Benjamin Flanders, a farmer and wheelwright, and Mary (Gordon) Flanders. He was born May 26, 1847, at Brentwood, N. H., and there gained his early education, until the Winter of '69, when he entered Kimball Academy to complete his preparation for college. After graduation he went, in September, to New London, where he was in a law office until January, '77. At that time a persistent form of neuralgia not only forced him to abandon study, but prevented him from undertaking any business until February, '82. Fearing, even then, that the confinement of office life might cause a return of his trouble, he accepted a position as general travelling agent for J. C. Ayer & Co., of Lowell, Mass. This work took him widely through the South and West, more especially in Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas. Some years since he was made general manager of the travelers' department of that firm. He still calls Brentwood his home, though spending most of his time in the Southwest. He was married June 3, 1895, to Miss Belle West. They have no children.

TILLOTSON WHEELER GILSON, Σ. Δ. Φ.

Tillotson W. Gilson, son of Alfred and Sarah (Gallup) Gilson, was born August 6, 1849, at Hartland, Vt., where his father was a farmer. Having exhausted the resources of the village schools, he completed his college preparation at Barre Academy, Barre, Vt., and in Kimball Union, at Meriden. Twenty-five and thirty years ago the habit of teaching school in the Winter was as distinctly uncommon with the scientific men as it was universal with the academics. Gilson, however, began his experience in this direction in the Winter of '69 and '70, and repeated it each Winter in college, except Junior year. After graduation he taught for three months in the Fall of '74 at Burlington College, Burlington, N. J., and then joined the faculty of Selleck's School in Norwalk, Conn., where Gates was Professor of Latin and Greek. Early in '76 he went to Stamford, Conn., as assistant to H. U. King of '73, who was then just starting his now famous "King's School for Boys." From Stamford he went to Dartmouth, in '79, and entered the Medical College. Before the end of the year he was obliged, by ill health, to drop his studies. To obtain a more active life, until he should return to medicine, he accepted a position with D. Appleton & Co., and for three years was engaged in introducing school-books through the New England States. At the end of that time he was asked to take the New England agency of J. B. Lippincott & Co. He remained with this firm eleven years, the last eight as general manager of their educational department in Philadelphia. His work there led to an invitation, in '93, to become a member of the firm of Ginn & Co., a firm composed largely of Dartmouth men, with his headquarters in Philadelphia. He was hardly established in this position when, on the resignation of their Chicago manager, he was placed in charge of that branch of the business, a position which he still holds. Gilson was married September 5, 1877, to Miss Elizabeth L. Ferris, a daughter of George B. Ferris of Danbury, Conn. They have one son, Henry Brockway, born July 3, 1879.

CHARLES ORVEL HUNTRESS, Φ. Ζ. Μ.

Charles O. Huntress, a son of Orvel Huntress, a farmer and merchant, of Auburn, Me., and Harriet Fuller Huntress, was born at Auburn, March 15, 1848. Two years later his parents moved to Boston; then, in '52, returned to Dixville, Me., and finally in '59 settled at Clay Center, Kansas. Huntress fitted at Manhattan, Kan., teaching meantime, in '64-'65-'66, at Council Grove and Waubaunsee, Kan. He joined the class at Dartmouth in Junior Fall, and the next year became Second Lieutenant of the '74 cadets. He was valedictorian of the scientific class. After graduation he was for the year '74-'75 principal of the High School at Faribault, Minn. From '75 to '77 he held the same position in the Franklin School, and from '77 to '82 in the Washington School at Minneapolis. In 1882 he became Second Assistant City Engineer of Minneapolis, holding that position for four years. For some years after this he was engaged in various business enterprises, of which no details are known, until his report in '98, when he was right-of-way agent for the Northwestern Telephone Exchange Company of St. Paul, with residence in Minneapolis. His present address is 1706 Fourth avenue, South. On July 20, 1874, he was married to Miss Emma J. Washburn. Mrs. Huntress died March 7, 1897, leaving three children: Carl W., born November 22, 1877; James, born March 16, 1892, and Mildred, born April 10, 1893.

JAMES BLOOMER JOHNSON, Σ. Δ. Φ.

James B. Johnson was born at Galena, Ill., May 11, 1851. His parents, James L., and Sarah (Bloomer) Johnson, in 1864 removed to Chicago, where his father became a lumber merchant. On graduating from the public schools he entered Chicago University in 1869, where he was a student at the time of the great fire in '71. He was then in the employ of the American Express Company, until he entered Dartmouth at the beginning of Junior year. In July, '74, he became bookkeeper for the firm of Hutt & Johnson (his father). This position he retained under the new firm, which succeeded to the business, on the death of his father in 1877, until 1880, when he became a member of the lumber-manufacturing firm of Ware, Johnson & Co., which, in 1885, became "Johnson Brothers" on the retirement of Mr. Ware. He is (or was) also interested in the grain and stock business of Johnson & Pardoe at Ulysses and Garrison, Neb. In March, 1882, he was married to Miss Ida Webster, of Chicago. At the time of his last report (1890) they had no children.

ROGER SHERMAN JOHNSON, Σ. Δ. Φ.

Roger S. Johnson, whose father, Henry Johnson, was a manufacturer of lumber and a real-estate dealer in Northfield, Mass., was born in that town, June 10, 1851. His mother's maiden name was Martha Wright. His preparatory studies after the public schools, were pursued at South Hadley Falls, Mass. After graduation, in '74, he entered the lumber business at Traer, Iowa. In 1880 he moved to New London, Wis., where he still continues the business of manufacturing lumber, boxes, and excelsior. He was married August 30, 1877, to Miss Carrie L. Foster. At the date of his last report (about '86) they had one child, Bertha A., born July 8, 1878.

ELGIN ALONZO JONES, Φ. Ζ. Μ.

Elgin A. Jones, son of John Quincy, and Cynthia (Gould) Jones, was born July 30, 1852, at Marlow, N. H., where his father conducted an extensive business in the manufacture of doors, sash, blinds, and house-trimmings, and also had a large probate business, being one of the old-time country squires. Jones was prepared for college in the Marlow Academy, and at the McCallum Institute of Mount Vernon, N. H. After graduation he returned to his home at Marlow, and for a time was associated with his father. From '76 to '80 he was Superintendent of Schools, and for the year '77 and '78 was principal of the Marlow Academy. In 1880 he became a general merchant. The larger share of his time, however, is devoted to those interests which are passing from the hands of his father, now over eighty years of age, into his own, so that he has become in fact, if not in name, "Squire Jones." He has a large business in probate work, in conveyancing, and insurance, and is actively engaged in surveying and engineering work. As a member of the School Board he has been an earnest and successful promoter of educational interests. By his efforts, largely, the school year in his own town has been increased from nineteen (average) to thirty weeks. Throughout his county and to a degree in the State he is known as one of the two men who organized the first and only County School Board in the State, a board which has not only accomplished much good in developing uniformity and elevating the standards of public-school teaching in the county, but is exerting a powerful stimulating influence upon other counties. Jones was married November 24, 1880, to Miss Sarah C. Boynton. They have no children.

LOUIS CLINTON MERRILL, Φ. Z. M.

Louis C. Merrill, son of Henry C. Merrill, a merchant, and Diantha (Patten) Merrill, was born in Manchester, N. H., on the 12th of January, 1853. He was fitted for college at the Manchester High School, but did not join the class of '74 until the Fall of Sophomore year. After graduation he was engaged in civil engineering work at Somerville and Arlington, Mass., for about two years. He then became associated with his father in the grocery business at Manchester, until July, '77, when he transferred his business interests to hardware. This he relinquished in 1881, to become the selling agent for Stratton, Merrill & Co., a flour and grain firm of Concord, N. H. He retained this position for ten years, and in July, 1891, became the managing partner in the firm of "Eastman & Merrill," fire-insurance agents, in Concord. In May, 1884, he was commissioned Captain in the New Hampshire National Guard, and served for five years as Brigade Quartermaster, on the staff of General D. M. White, commanding the First Brigade. In January, 1892, he was elected secretary of the Concord Mutual Fire Insurance Company of New Hampshire. Merrill was married June 29, 1888, to Miss Fanny Wadleigh, daughter of Levi C. Wadleigh. They have one son, Henry Wadleigh, born April 20, 1891.

WILLIAM MORRILL, Φ. Z. M.

William Morrill, son of William and Dorothy (Gordon) Morrill, was born September 15, 1847, at Brentwood, N. H., where his father was engaged in farming. After passing through the public schools he entered Kimball Union Academy, where he graduated in 1870 to enter the class of '74. From Dartmouth he returned to Brentwood, to devote himself to the restful life of a farmer. In 1876 he was a member, with so many other Dartmouth men, of the Constitutional Convention. For the years 1880-'81 and '82 he was Town Treasurer, and for a number of years was in the employ of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, as surveyor of lumber. During this time he lived for two years at Manchester. In 1891 he represented his town in the Legislature. In 1892-'94, and '96 he was elected Register of Deeds for Rockingham County, and, as he was to be a candidate in '96, doubtless still holds that office. He was married May 14, 1878, to Miss Ella J. Brown of Fremont, N. H. They have one daughter, Mary E., born August 5, 1887, at Manchester.

WALTER PARKER, Σ. Δ. Φ.

Walter Parker was born December 16, 1852, to Joseph C. and Emily (Ward) Parker, at Barre, Vt., where his father was a farmer. In 1857 his father moved to Queechee, Vt., to engage in the manufacture of woollens. Parker was another Kimball Union Academy student, graduating in '70, to go directly to Dartmouth. After leaving Dartmouth he returned to Queechee and started to master the mysteries of woolen manufacture and the secrets which contribute to financial success in that business in Vermont. Two years later his success justified his becoming a member of the firm of J. C. Parker & Co., with satisfaction to all the parties interested. Other facts related to his life are as profound secrets as those of the woolen business. It is known, however, that he has never married, and to the outside world he appears at peace with all men, including himself.

EDWIN OSGOOD PEARSON, Φ. Ζ. Μ.

Edwin O. Pearson, son of Moses O. and Nancy (Garvin) Pearson, was born in Northfield, Vt., November 8, 1852. In 1854 his father removed to Manchester, where Pearson prepared for college at the high school. On leaving college he was for a year in the counting-room of the Manchester Corporation, and then took up the study of medicine, graduating at Dartmouth in 1878, as valedictorian. The following May he was made second assistant physician in the New Hampshire Insane Asylum at Concord. He resigned this position January 26, 1884, and began practice at Manchester, N. H., where his death occurred two years later, October 28, 1886. In 1884 he was City Physician of Manchester, and at the time of his death was surgeon of the Stark Manufacturing Corporation in that city. He was married February 12, 1884, to Miss Helen Augusta Martin, of Windsor, Vt.

VICTOR IRA SPEAR, Σ. Δ. Φ.

Victor I. Spear is a son of Jacob A. Spear, a farmer, and Caroline (Flint) Spear. He was born September 20, 1852, at Braintree, Vt. He was one of the few teachers in his class, having started that work in the winter of '69 and '70 in Roxbury, Vt., while taking his preparatory course at the Randolph Academy. He also taught two winters during the college course. After graduation he taught for two years, until 1876, when he returned to Braintree to take up the life of a farmer and the raising of thoroughbred sheep. In 1880 he was a member of the Vermont Legislature, and in 1886 of the Senate. Since 1890 he has been a member and secretary of the Vermont Board of Agriculture and Cattle Commission. He was married on December 29, 1886, to Miss Abbie M. Welch.

The records, as received from the former secretary of the scientific class, contained absolutely nothing relating to three men, and the circulars sent during the past five years, though not returned, have gained no response. The following is taken from the college records:

WALTER HENRY FOSTER, Φ. Ζ. Μ., was born March 9, 1853, and entered college from Rutland, Vt. He died April 1, 1878.

ROBERT HAWTHORN, Φ. Ζ. Μ., was born April 10, 1842, and entered from Highland, Kan.

WILLIAM HENRY PRATT, Σ. Δ. Φ., was born October 23, 1852, and entered from West Hartford, Vt.

CHANDLER BUILDING.

CROSBY HALL.

NON-GRADUATES: ACADEMIC.

WILLARD NORRIS ARMINGTON, born November 10, 1849. Entered from Barre Academy. Left in April, '72, and graduated at University of Vermont in 1874.

CLARK DUNHAM BARROWS, born April 14, 1850. Entered from Newark, O. Left in November, '70. Entered '75 at beginning of course and graduated with that class.

WELLS ANDERSON BINGHAM, whose father, Elisha Bingham, was a farmer, was born at East Haddam, Conn., August 7, 1846. On the breaking out of the civil war he was among the first to respond to the call to arms. Entering the army before he was seventeen, he fought and endured the hardships of a soldier's life for three years. On leaving the army he began preparation for college, and some years later became a student at Meriden. He entered college, on partial course, omitting mathematics, but at the beginning of sophomore year he made up the first year's work and took up the full course with such earnestness that he ranked in the first ten. He had never fully recovered from the effects of army life, and under this excess of work his eyes failed, and he left college to enter business. From 1872 to '75 he was a manufacturer of paper at Livingston, N. Y. Since '75 he has been a wholesale paper merchant in New York City. His place of business is now at 150-52 Worth street, and his residence in Bloomfield, N. J. Bingham was married October 11, 1876, to Miss Anna Katharine Miller. They have four children, Ernest Cotting, born May 22, 1878; Edgar Miller, born October 15, 1880; Kathrine Marjorie, born December 9, 1887; and Wells Anderson, Jr., born November 8, 1891.

DANIEL BRACKETT, A. A. Φ. Born November 25, 1851. Fitted at Gorham Seminary, Maine. Left at end of junior year.

SAMUEL JOSEPH BURNHAM, son of Joseph S. Burnham, was born February 13, 1853, at Durham, N. H. Fitted at the Pittsfield (N. H.) Academy. Died at Hanover, March 27, 1872.

SILAS HENRY BURNHAM, W.R., son of Sumner and Christiana (Washburn) Burnham, was born April 12, 1848, at Harrison, Me., where his father was at that time a farmer. Later the family moved to Norway, Me. Burnham taught for two winters during his preparatory course at the Hebron Academy, and also for the first two winters of the college course. On leaving the class at the end of Junior year he took up the study of law in the offices of Hon. Chas. F. Libby of Portland, Me., and after admission to the bar in 1875, began practice in Norway. He remained in Norway until 1880, when he turned his face westward and settled in Lincoln, Neb. He soon became diverted from law to real estate and the placing of loans. This led naturally to the banking business. He organized the First National Bank of Broken Bow, Neb., and has continued to be its president. In 1888 he organized the American Exchange National Bank of Lincoln, which in 1892 absorbed the State National Bank of Lincoln, and in '99 bought out the First National Bank, the oldest and largest in the city, taking the name as well as the business for the united institutions. Of this bank he is president and active manager. He was married October 26, 1876, to Miss Eliza Lewis of Glasgow, Ky., daughter of Hon. Joseph H. Lewis, for seventeen years a Justice of the Kentucky Supreme Court. They have four children, Sarah W., Joseph L., Carrie Loise, and Silas H., Jr.

JOHN ROBINSON CHALMERS, born August 2, 1845.

FREDERIC LUCIAN CLARK, born June 18, 1851.

LEWIS HAYDEN DE MERRITT, born March 29, 1849.

WILLIAM SPOFFORD FIELD, born January 26, 1853.

ISAAC FREEMAN HALL, born April 23, 1847.

NATHAN ADOLPHUS HASKALL, born August 15, 1849.

ISAAC HILLER, born July 31, 1852.

CLARENCE HENRY HUBBARD, born July 5, 1851.

TIM BLAISDELL MERRILL, born September 2, 1853.

OSCAR MACK METCALF, A.K.E., was born June 5, 1846, at Gilsom, N. H. He fitted for college at Westminster, Vt. Left at end of Junior year, and in '76 was studying law at Norway, Me. In April, '77, began practice in Portland, Me., where the class report of 1880 also located him. Two years later he had removed to St. Paul, where he is still in the practice of law. Repeated requests for further information have met with no response. He is unmarried and is beginning to regret it.

GEORGE LOREN PEASE, born June 31, 1848. Entered in May, '71, from Amherst. Remained but a few months.

HERBERT FIELD PLIMPTON, born April 9, 1853. Entered from Barre Academy.

JOHN MURRELL POSTON, born October 9, 1850, in Clarksville, Tenn. Fitted at Marysville and Oakland, Cal. Remained at Dartmouth first two terms of Freshman year, then entered class of '73 at Yale, at beginning of third term of Sophomore year. Graduated in '73. After graduation, taught in California a few months, then began study of law. Admitted to bar in October, '75. Practised in San Francisco until 1880. Then elected City Attorney of Oakland. At end of two-year term opened an office in Oakland, where, at date of report (1884), he still remained.

TRUMAN BISHOP RICE, A.A.Φ., born December 20, 1847, entered from Barre Academy. Left about Sophomore year to join class of '75, with which he graduated.

CHARLES WESLEY SAVAGE, A.A.Φ., the son of Rev. Isaac A. and Mary A. (Clarke) Savage, was born in Holliston, Mass., June 14, 1852. He entered Dartmouth from the Cambridge High School, and ranked as class-leader at the end of Freshman year, when he went to Harvard. After graduating, in '74, he taught for a few months in Quincy, Ill., and then began the study of law, which he pursued at Quincy, Detroit, and Boston University, where he graduated in '77. He returned to Detroit, and was admitted to practice, but eight months later again coming East, settled in Lowell, Mass., where he continued in practice as long as his health permitted. Soon after leaving college he developed signs of pulmonary trouble, and as this disease advanced he was compelled to abandon professional work some time before his death. In December, '89, he went to Asheville, in hope of regaining his strength, but soon returned to Lowell, where his death took place February 20, 1890.

JOHN LAFAYETTE WARD, born August 11, 1851. Fitted at Bernardston, Mass. Left about Sophomore year.

JAMES WATSON, JR., born March 14, 1852. Entered September 1, 1871, from Eldridge, Pa. Separated April 22, 1872.

JAMES DUNCAN UPHAM, born November 7, 1853. Entered from Tilton Conference Seminary.

NON-GRADUATES: SCIENTIFIC.

CHARLES HOBART CLARK, Φ.Z.M., son of Leonard Clark, a merchant, was born in Hubbardston, Mass., April 28, 1851. He left Dartmouth, to enter the United States Military Academy at West Point, from which he graduated in '75, and was appointed Second Lieutenant in the First United States Artillery, the 16th of June, '75. He was attached to this service until the 16th of June, '80 when he was transferred to the Ordnance Department. His stations have been in the Indian Territory; at Key West, Fla.; Ft. Adams, Newport, R. I.; Fortress Monroe; West Point, and the armory in Springfield, Mass. He was married April 29, 1880, to Miss Helen M. DeRussy, daughter of René E. De Russy, a graduate of West Point, in 1812. They have two children, Helen De R., born December 24, 1881, and Miriam, born March 1, 1884.

CLARENCE RUDOLPHUS GARDNER, Φ.Z.M., son of William W. Gardner, a physician, of Haydenville, Mass., was born August 24, 1850. He fitted at the Springfield, Mass., High School. He left Dartmouth at the end of Sophomore year, to enter the engineering department of Tufts College, from which he graduated in 1874. In the Fall of '76 he entered the Medical College of the New York University, from which he graduated in '78. The following year he was interne at the New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute. At the close of this service he entered upon the practice of medicine as a specialist in diseases of the eye and ear.

EDWARD BRUSH KELLOGG, son of Edward B. and Susan Morris Kellogg, was born at Knoxville, Ill., June 10, 1854. On graduating from the Norwich (Vt.) Academy, he entered Michigan University. After one year there he spent one year at Dartmouth, taking a special course. Following this he was for seven years in the retail department of Scribner Brothers in New York City. Since then he has been engaged in business, with New York as his headquarters.

90

ROBERT OWEN MASON, Φ.Z.M., son of William G. Mason, a contractor, was born at Lebanon, N. H., February 4, 1853. In 1856 his father moved to Concord, where he was fitted in the High School. He left Dartmouth at the end of Junior year. His residence was in Boston from '73 to '78. He is now in business at Burlington, Vt. He was married February 3, 1878, to Miss J. Eva Moulton, daughter of Rev. A. K. Moulton, a graduate of Hinsdale College. They had one child, Sadie F., born November 7, 1881.

THOMAS WILSON MONTGOMERY, Σ.Δ.Φ., born June 19, 1849. Entered from Newark, O. Left at end of third year.

JOHN TALBOT, changed to academic course, but did not graduate.

JOHN SYDNEY WALKER, born January 26, 1853. Went to Cornell at end of year.

CLARENCE THURSTON BARTER, GEORGE RAINSFORD BOWEN, EDWARD GAY CLARKE, names found in catalogue for freshman year.

CLASS OFFICERS.

ACADEMIC.

Freshman—President, H. L. Horne; Vice-President, F. O. Baldwin; Secretary, A. W. Beasley; Treasurer, C. O. Gates; Historian, C. H. Moore.

Sophomore—President, W. H. Davis, S. L. Powers; Vice-President, F. O. Baldwin, S. H. Burnham; Secretary, James W. Putnam, R. G. Read; Treasurer, A. F. Taylor, M. P. Dickey; Historian, E. G. Eastman.

Junior—President, S. H. Burnham; Vice-President, F. O. Baldwin; Secretary, A. W. Beasley; Treasurer, C. W. Scott; Historian, H. F. Chase.

Senior—President, H. G. Brainerd; Vice-President, J. C. Barrett; Secretary, Doane Cogswell; Treasurer, H. G. Sanborn; Historian, S. L. Powers.

SCIENTIFIC.

Freshman—President, John Talbot; Vice-President, R. S. Johnson; Secretary and Treasurer, W. H. Foster; Historian, E. A. Jones.

Sophomore—President, C. H. Evans; Vice-President, O. W. Burnham; Secretary and Treasurer, W. H. Foster; Historian, E. A. Jones.

Second Sophomore (Junior not given)—President, Walter Parker; Vice-President, E. O. Pearson; Secretary and Treasurer, W. H. Foster; Historian, G. J. Carr.

Senior—President, V. I. Spear; Vice-President, W. H. Foster; Secretary and Treasurer, E. O. Pearson; Historian, G. J. Carr.

JUNIOR HONORS.

	Spoon.	Spade.	Spurs.	Knife.
Recipient—	Badgley.	Cogswell.	Crawford.	Richardson.
Presenter—	Dickey.	Nesmith.	Scott.	Powers.

GLEE CLUB.

H. S. Burnham, F. C. Southgate, R. B. Wright....First Tenors
Doane Cogswell, H. F. Chase.....Second Tenors
J. B. Richardson, H. N. Allin, A. W. Beasley.....First Bass
F. O. Baldwin, H. L. Horne.....Second Bass

92

EDITORS OF "THE DARTMOUTH."

O. A. Nesmith, J. C. Barrett, F. O. Baldwin, H. P. Lewis,
W. E. Petrie, E. C. Crawford, H. H. Hart, H. G. Brainerd,
E. S. Ball, C. O. Huntress.

Publishing Committee—G. W. Lee, A. Eaton, H. Brockway.

EDITORS OF "THE ANVIL."

S. W. McCall, H. G. Brainerd, A. F. Taylor, S. L. Powers,
G. W. Lee.

Business Agent—F. N. Parsons.

EDITORS OF "THE ÆGIS."

H. F. Chase, J. C. Barrett, F. Blanchard,
C. E. Quimby, R. G. Reed, C. W. Scott.

BASE-BALL HEROES.

On College Nine—H. S. Burnham, H. L. Horne, C. O. Gates,
E. S. Ball, H. G. Brainerd, G. H. Stevens.

Freshman Class Nine—Ball, Capt., 1 b.; Pierce, c.; Baldwin, p.; Stevens, s. s.; Burnham, 2 b.; Horne, 3 b.; Gates, 1. f.; Freeman, c. f.; Quimby, r. f.

Sophomore—Same, with Webster in place of Horne.

Junior—Pierce, Capt., and Brainerd, at 3d base.

Freshman, Scientific—Carr, Capt., 3 b.; Dow, c.; Talbot, p.;
Pearson, 1 b.; Evans, 2 b.; Gilson, s. s.; Walker, 1. f.; Foster,
c. f.; Hawthorn, r. f.

Sophomore—Pearson, c.; Hawthorn, 1 b.; W. Morrill, r. f.

Junior—Johnson, c.; Jones, 2 b.; Foster, 1. f.; Huntress, c. f.

MEMBERS OF COLLEGE BOAT CREW.

(From Memory.)

A. R. Archibald, A. Eaton, C. O. Gates, G. W. Lee.

SENIOR CLASS CREW.

Doane Cogswell, bow; F. S. Streeter, 2; A. W. Beasley, 3;
C. F. Caswell, 4; G. W. Lee, 5; C. O. Gates, stroke.

93

PRIZES.

Lockwood Oratorical, 1871.....	J. A. Aiken (then in '73)
Lockwood Oratorical, 1872..	{ S. H. Burnham, W. H. Davis, first H. N. Allin, second
Latin Prize.....	C. H. Pettee, first; S. W. McCall, second
Junior Rhetorical.....	S. L. Powers, J. B. Richardson
Junior Oratorical.....	A. F. Taylor, first; S. L. Powers, second
Junior Mathematical....	C. E. Quimby, first; J. S. Haines, second
Senior, Kimball Rhetorical.....	F. Blanchard
Grimes Rhetorical.....	J. C. Barrett, first; H. H. Hart, second
Senior Prize for General Improvement.....	F. L. Allen

CLASS DAY SPEAKERS,

Tuesday, June 23, 1874.

Introductory Address.....	Charles O. Gates
Class Orator.....	Henry H. Hart
Class Poet.....	Ferdinand Blanchard
Address to the Class.....	Mark Ward
Address to the President.....	R. G. Reed
Chronicles.....	Henry G. Brainerd
Prophecies.....	Clinton H. Moore
Address at "Old Pine".....	H. J. Tatterson
Class Ode.....	William S. Rix
Marshal—H. L. Horne.

ANNIVERSARY OF SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.

Tuesday, June 23, 1874.

E. A. Jones.....	Modernism in Architecture
Henry Brockway.....	Relation of Science to Manufacture
George J. Carr.....	Granges and Grangers
W. H. Foster.....	Nature Subservient to Man
T. W. Gilson.....	Facility of Communication as Promoting Peace
R. S. Johnson.....	The Construction of the Hoosac Tunnel
Walter Parker.....	Johann Friedrich Schiller
V. I. Spear.....	Aerial Navigation
Chas. O. Huntress.....	The Prevention and Control of Fires

94

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKERS.

June 25, 1874.

Salutatory Oration in Latin.....	Charles H. Pettee
English Oration.....	E. C. Crawford
The Fanaticism of Reform.
Dissertation.....	R. B. Wright
Ancient Schools of Law.
English Oration.....	F. O. Baldwin
Classical and Scientific Pedantry.
Philosophical Oration.....	John A. Aiken
Relations of Mental and Natural Science.
English Oration.....	Chas. E. Quimby
History in Tombs.
Dissertation.....	F. C. Southgate
English and American Poets.
Rhetorical Disputation.....	C. W. Scott, W. E. Petrie
Has Eloquence Declined in Our Country?
Dissertation.....	Joseph L. Caverly
Foreign Education for American Students.
English Oration.....	Frank N. Parsons
Mercantile Credit as a Social Power.
English Oration.....	F. L. Allen
Morals in Statesmanship.
English Oration.....	Homer P. Lewis
The Novel a Substitute for the Drama.
Dissertation.....	G. W. Lee
Watchwords in Politics.
Political Disputation.....	Edgar L. Morse, W. W. Morrill
Is Bismarck Justifiable in His Treatment of Catholics?
English Oration.....	E. S. Ball
Conflict of Creeds and Education.
Philosophical Oration.....	S. W. McCall
The Philosophy of Reform.
Dissertation.....	W. H. Davis
Relation of Vested Rights to Human Progress.
Philosophical Disputation.....	A. W. Beasley, M. P. Dickey
Is the Theory of Evolution Defensible?
Dissertation.....	J. C. Barrett
Precedents in Law.
Dissertation.....	E. J. Brown
Pacific Tendencies of European Diplomacy.
Valedictory Address.....	Joseph S. Haines

MASTER OF ARTS.

BY FERDINAND BLANCHARD.

Read at Dartmouth, on taking his Master's degree, June, 1877.

Time-honored title! brief but comprehensive!
Of plain A.B. an increment intensive!
If still my rhyming dictionaries will
To furnish wherewithal to drive my quill;
If cyclopedias still contain a treasure
That never yet was set in rhyme and measure;
If good Roget has not been put at pawn,
And with it half my inspiration gone;
Though genius elevates his Roman nose
Because to all alike the title goes;
Though wealth may scorn to turn his lazy step
To take an honor bought and sold so cheap;
Though I myself may lack the scanty pittance
Required among thy beaux to gain admittance;
I'll haunt the landing near the nuptial chamber,
Strike up a stanza as each favored member
Of Seventy-Four shall pay his duties to thee,
And toast thy health although I cannot woo thee.

In other days, when mortals took degrees,
They sought the honor on their bended knees;—
Wrote rival poems, essays, exegeses,
Philippics, epics, treatises, or theses;
Or bribed the dons, or bought the title straightway,
By giving funds to build a hall or gateway.
In brief, A.M. was then desired and sought,
Dispensed to merit, struggled for, and bought.
Magister Artium meant the man had travelled Quadrivium and Trivium—had unravelled
The seven arts then taught in learned schools.
Of plain Arithmetic he knew the rules;
Of Euclid's book could demonstrate the tenets;
Could sing the scale and name the stars and planets.
Had, most of all, become a good declaimer
By studying Logic, Rhetoric, and Grammar.

"How changed, alas!" The bilious critic cries.
"No more we seek the title as a prize;
It hangs on every bush, within the reach
Of men who neither write, or sing, or preach.
A.B. is given when the limpid mind
Holds thoughts and facts of every shade and kind

916
In saturate solution. Then the sun
Through three swift-rolling summers shines upon
The precious tub; the liquid turns to vapor,
That fogs the face of many a daily paper,
And when Commencement changes B. to M.,
The mind has reached the density of cream.
More years; and LL.D.—or D.D. was it?
Denotes a solid crystalline deposit
Of thoughts and trite opinions simmered down,
And many a sage reflection not his own.
But still the Doctor's caput holds no more
Than did the graduate's in years before."

So says some sombre sage, but ne'er will I
Believe his dismal tale or prophecy.
I hold these titles proof of something done—
Acquirements made, or battles fought and won.
And tho' I spur my steed until he sweats,
I'll prove Magister merits all he gets.

Behold the graduate Commencement day,
And still go with him as he creeps away
To humbler scenes. At first a polished boot
Inwraps his dainty, light, elastic foot.
A broadcloth coat that fits him like a glove,
And just as much moustache as ladies love.
What dull observer—what mere passer-by
Can fail to see the genius in his eye?
His classic brow, his stove-pipe hat, he knows
Will bring him reverence wheresoe'er he goes.

Alas! alas! three months, or such a matter.
May show an empty purse, a hungry platter.
No school engaged—no thousand dollars clear
No sinecure with all he wants a year.
The time creeps on; the fates are unpropitious;
Committee men begin to be suspicious.
No friendly word or deed—no fond embraces;
He feels his lines are cast in chilly places.
'Tis here he learns the first post-graduate art,
Of bearing well the prick of Fortune's dart.

Then ars secunda is the art of living;
Comprised in taking e'er, but never giving.
Think not of mystic moral things I mutter,
For ars secunda treats of bread and butter—
The rate of rents, the price of meat and tea,
And various things that plague him mightily—

Things never thought of 'mid these granite hills,
In hall and club, where uncle paid the bills.
From off this milk and honey high plateau
He tumbles to starvation rocks below.
Full well I deem the man deserves a cheer,
Who lives thereon the first and second year;
And should he beat starvation winters three,
For this alone he merits his degree.

Anon he mounts the pedagogic stool,
To learn ars tertia.—Yes, he got a school
The second spring—agreed to teach for life,
And pay, each year, unto the chairman's wife
A square fifteen per cent. of all he made;
Forgive the man; 'twas all the chance he had.
A strongly rural place, a woody region,
Where children and mosquitoes by the legion
Did swarm about him. There he strove to guide
Those wayward colts; but oft his spirit sighed
To see them dull and staring, stupid, idle—
More need of whip and spur than bit and bridle.

He learns to punish tricks he once did practice;
His conversation bristles like a cactus
With spines of sharp correction and reproof;
Yet seldom speaks; is somewhat grave and gruff.
But when he speaks, celestial gods, fly low;
There's something coming that you ought to know.

Now, art the fourth. Oh! wondrous mystic science!
That sets all rule and reason at defiance!
That makes your inclination seem your duty;
That sees in rouge and wrinkles classic beauty.
That bids the soul forget all other arts;
O, ars amoris! Queen of human hearts!

Thus far, to-day, before the powers, I read
My catalogue. "Enough," the speaker said;
"All baccalaurei, three years old or more,
Who claim to own and know these artes four,
Come forth! Why ask the ancient seven,
Since now the fourth is but a step from heaven?
Behold, I dub you each and all A.M."
And sealed the business with a loud ahem.

See now, ye Masters all, I told you true;
The honor's given where the honor's due.

Autographs.

Autographs.

Autographs.

Autographs.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 029 909 544 7